Hongkong Dollar Dealing Stopped

New York, June 5. NANTUCKET DISASTER SEQUEL

U.S. CLAIM AGAINST THE OLYMPIC

HALF A MILLION DOLLARS

New York, June 5. A huge claim for damages is being lodged against the White Star liner Olympic as a sequel to her mishap last month when she rammed and sank the Nantucket lightship in a dense fog.

The United States Government is claiming half a million dollars against the Olympic in connection with the sinking.

Eleven counts against the ship are detailed in the statement of claims, including allegations of failure to keep a proper lookout, of excessive and dangerous speed in a fog, and of failure to take proper steps when the danger of a collision was apparent.

"CONDEMNED TO BE SOLD"

The claim demands that the Olympic, which is due to arrive in New York to-morrow, should be "condemned to be sold to pay the damages sought."

No claim has been made in behalf of the relatives of the members of the crew of the Nantucket lightship who perished in the disaster.

Captain Hinks, commander of the Olympic, following the disaster, stated that the lightship's directional wireless beam became confused a few minutes before the crash. He altered course ten degrees and shortly after the order was acted upon, the lightship was sighted dead ahead in the fog and collision was inevitable.

VICTIM OF OWN BEAM?

A survivor declared that the Olympic was not seen from the Nantucket boat until one minute before the crash.

The New York Department of commerce expressed the view that the lightship was the victim of her own beam wireless, recalling that when another liner shortly before had scraped her side, the navigator was accurately following the beam's instructions, but could not alter course in time.—Reuter

MR. CHAN LIM-PAK REMANDED

RELEASED ON BAIL OF $10,000

COMMITTAL TO BE SOUGHT

Great interest was centred in the appearance at the Central Magistracy this morning of Chan Lim-pak, prominent member of the Chinese business community, on six counts of alleged fraudulent appropriation of money and fraudulent keeping of accounts of the Nanyang Tobacco Co.

Accused, who was arrested on a warrant yesterday and later released on bail of $10,000, came before Mr. Hamilton, and with him was Mr. M. K. Lo, who is appearing for the defence. Mr. Edgar Davidson, of Messrs. Hastings & Co., for the prosecution, intimated that the case would be one for committal to the Criminal Sessions.

The accused, aged 49 years, managing director of the Canton Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company, Ltd., a native of Kan Tsun village, Namhoi, with a residence at No. 15, Peak Road, Hongkong, was formally charged on six counts of fraudulent appropriation of money and fraudulent keeping of accounts of the Nanyang Tobacco Co. with regard to three sums each of $500, on March 31, 1933; July 31, 1933; and December 28, 1933.

Mr. Edgar Davidson appeared for Mr. T. Johnson Wong, the complainant, and Mr. M. K. Lo was for the defence.

Mr. Davidson asked for a remand for as lengthy a period as possible as he was instructing counsel to appear, and the case would be one for committal.

Mr. Hamilton asked Mr. Lo whether seven days' remand on bail would be sufficient, and Mr. Lo agreed.

IMPOUNDING OF BOOKS.

Mr. Hamilton next asked whether there was likely to be any difficulty with regard to books, and Mr. Davidson asked that an order be made under Section 91 of the Lunacy Ordinance, which was the section under which the alleged offences had been committed, and suggested that letters, cash books and vouchers of last year be impounded.

Mr. Lo:—I am not here to oblige the prosecution in any shape or form, and, speaking as solicitor for the Company, I have no reason why the Company should give up possession of any books which are properly in their custody. I will take notice of any application my friend makes, but in regard to this I oppose. For one thing, your Worship will appreciate that the prosecution has no doubt taken a long time in making investigations, whereas this of course is a great surprise to the defence, I should be personally embarrassed if the books are not accessible to me.

Mr. Hamilton:—I was intending to propose that the books should be in police custody, and that neither side should have access to them before the other. I may go a step further and subsequently dictate the location of the books.

DOES SECTION APPLY?

Mr. Lo:—I cannot see that that section read out by my friend (Continued on Page 7.)

DERBY DAY AT EPSOM

ENORMOUS CROWD EXPECTED

AGA KHAN'S COLT PROMISING

London, June 5. Epsom Downs is already bearing signs that the great sporting event of the year, the Derby, is approaching.

Gipsies, tinkers, roundabouts and tipsters are already in evidence ready for the great occasion.

Glorious weather is expected and a terrific crowd, probably breaking all records is anticipated. Eight hundred police will be on duty on the roads leading to the course.

Several of the horses, including Colombo, Medieval Knight and Eastern have arrived, enabling them to have a penultimate night and a quiet morning, none of the excitement that went with the victory of April the Fifth two years ago.

COLOMBO'S PROGRAMME.

Colombo will be "called" at six o'clock and given a light breakfast, after which he will be given a gentle walk round the park followed by a canter of Lord Rosebery's private track.

He then returns to Stall No. 12 for grooming.

To-day, the favourite went over six furlongs at a nice pace, but Mr. Butters, the trainer of Umidwar, is very hopeful, since his colt likes hard going, which is certain to prevail.

It is also understood that he gave the fullest satisfaction in Saturday's gallop.—Reuter

B. A. T. STRIKE IN SHANGHAI

DISPUTE DEFYING SETTLEMENT

Shanghai, June 5. The B.A.T. strike is proving a bit hard to crack in spite of mediation by the municipal authorities. The strikers have now decided to send a delegation to Nanking to explain their case to the Central authorities.

It is likely that the Nanking Ministry of Industry will take a hand. An official of the Ministry has just completed an investigation of the case in Shanghai and is returning to Nanking to submit a report.—Central News

BARTHOU AGAIN ROUSES BITTERNESS

COLLAPSE NEARS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 6, 9.05 a.m.)

Geneva, June 5.

The Disarmament Conference threatens to come to a disastrous end on a note of embittered counter-accusations regarding responsibility for failure.

Mr. Arthur Henderson and M. Barthou (who quarrelled with Sir John Simon last week) had a sharp passage of words at to-day's meeting of the Bureau of the Conference, but Mr. Henderson was partially mollified when M. Barthou apologised for insinuations of a lack of impartiality.

Eleventh-hour efforts are still being made to avert collapse, but the prospects are practically nil, as even those making the efforts tackle their task in a spirit of pessimism.

FRANCE REJECTS COMPROMISE SUGGESTION

The Bureau meeting assembled at 3.40 p.m. this afternoon and Mr. Henderson proposed a compromise resolution which sought to satisfy the Anglo-American demands for disarmament and the Franco-Russian demands for security.

The resolution provides that the General Commission shall continue with efforts to secure an agreement for disarmament, while a Political Commission, representing all the Powers, should consider the question of security.

FRENCH ATTITUDE.

M. Barthou rejected Mr. Henderson's proposal, the nature of his attack leading to sharp words.

Afterwards, French quarters announced the end of the Conference.

They declared that there was no alternative to bringing the Conference to an end as long as security was not to be actively discussed, and first.

It is understood that Senor Madriaga, the Spanish delegate, is attempting a last-minute intervention, but the French insist that the Conference is over.

SECURITY FIRST.

M. Barthou said he was compelled to reject the Henderson compromise resolution because it placed political questions before security.

He declared that France would not oppose Germany's return to the Disarmament Conference but was definitely not willing to make any sacrifice in order to induce Germany to return.

Mr. Anthony Eden, for Britain, accepted the Henderson resolution wholeheartedly.

HENDERSON THREAT.

Mr. Henderson then threatened to resign his position as president of the Conference if the French did not submit a proposal which would prove acceptable to the Conference.

He angrily declared that if M. Barthou did not present a plan before to-morrow (Wednesday) in lieu of attacking every proposal by any other country, he would submit France's responsibility for the Conference's failure to the General Commission.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

The French delegate, he said, had thrown down every possible proposal. It was therefore incumbent upon them to offer a substitute, to prevent something from happening which would be a disaster to the world.—Reuter

MERTHYR ELECTION

LABOUR EASILY HOLDS SEAT

FOUR-CORNERED FIGHT

London, June 6.

The result of the bye-election at Merthyr-Tydfil, caused by the death of the Labour M.P., Mr. R. C. Wallhead, who had represented the constituency for twelve years, was declared early this morning as follows:

S. O. Davies (Labour)	18,645
J. V. Evans (Liberal)	10,378
Campbell Stephens (I.L.P.)	3,508
W. Hannington (Com.)	3,469
Lab. maj. over Lib.	8,269

The Labour candidate, although many votes were diverted to the more extreme wings of the Socialist movement, retained a clear majority over all other candidates. The last election saw a straight fight between Mr. Wallhead and a New Party candidate, the Labour majority being 13,785.

Nearly 36,000 went to the poll to-day, five hundred better than in the general election. The Conservatives made no attempt to capture a hopeless seat.—Reuter

A BREACH OF TRADITION

U.S. AND BRITISH DEBT NOTE

ASTONISHMENT IN LONDON

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 6, 10.05 a.m.)

London, June 5. Much astonishment has been caused in London political circles by the action of the United States Government in releasing the British war debt note before Mr. Chamberlain had had a chance to place the data before the House of Commons in accordance with tradition.

Although there is this feeling, members of the Cabinet declined to make any public statement on the matter or to discuss it.—Reuter Special

The Chancellor of the Exchequer made his promised statement in the House of Commons to-day.

A GROWING DEBT?

It was followed by the issue of a White Paper containing the recent correspondence on the subject between the British and United States Governments, drawing special attention to the fact that while Britain borrowed $4,277,000,000 from the United States, payments have been made totalling $2,025,000,000 and yet the nominal amount of the debt still outstanding amounts to $4,713,785,000.

Mr. Chamberlain recalled that the British Government, in its Note of December 1, 1932, gave a (Continued on Page 7.)

UNDERGROUND OIL RESERVOIRS

FRENCH FEARS OF AIR RAIDS

Paris, June 5.

France's anxieties concerning the peril of air attacks in the event of war were exemplified in the Chamber of Deputies to-day.

It is learned that France is now to embark upon a five-year programme for the construction of underground oil reservoirs to protect the Navy's fuel from air attacks.

The details were explained by the Minister of Marine to the Finance Committee of the Chamber this afternoon. Of $25,000,000 francs recently allotted to the French Navy under the national defence scheme, $20,000,000 francs will be spent for this purpose, while eighty millions will be devoted to coastal defence, mainly in the form of shore batteries in North Africa, the French Mediterranean Coast and the Strait of Dover.

Another step in air defence was outlined by the Minister of the Interior, who explained the Council of Ministers' Bill for the defence of the civil population against air attacks.—Reuter

Married Flirts

by MABEL
McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GYPSEY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA HOTALING and DEREK BLISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy intends to go on with her job, teaching in a settlement.

After returning from a honeymoon in Europe Lila asks the Weavers to dinner. Among the guests is wealthy MAJCO BROUGHTON, who once asked Gypsy to marry him. He showers Gypsy with attention and Tom is jealous.

BroUGHTON offers her a job on Saturdays, rain-suiting his library and Gypsy accepts without telling Tom. Just as she finishes the work she is taken ill and the doctor tells her she is going to have a baby. Tom insists she must give up her job at the settlement. Gypsy is happy keeping house until Lila comes back from a winter in Florida and asks her to luncheon. Gypsy realises her clothes are shabby in comparison with Lila's.

CHAPTER XVIII

The big car slid up and Lila got out. She was in sunbeams black from head to foot, with accents of white. White gloves, white flowers on her tilted black pageboys pill-box, frill of white organdie emerging from her jacket. Gypsy, waiting in one corner of the lobby saw her come in. Even in that well dressed throng of noonday butterflies, Lila stood out. Heads were turned as she went through, consciously unconscious of scrutiny.

Gypsy thought, humorously, "Surely I'm the only woman in the restaurant who's washed her own breakfast dishes." All of these lunchers were so sleek and assured, they made her feel shabby and small.

Lila was all gracious interest. After a brief and gay recital of her own winter fitting, she had turned the conversation to the Weavers' plans for the summer. She and Derek were taking a little place at Southampton, just a cottage really—only seven rooms—but it was right on the shore. They'd go down the first of June.

"We have a lease on the apartment," Gypsy said sturdily. "We will be there all summer."

"Not in July, my dear," murmured Lila, scandalized. "You'll perish! You must come down to us for a week or two."

She means to be kind, Gypsy thought, but I wish her tongue weren't so patronizing. Aloud she said something light about millions of people remaining in the city all summer and finding it fairly comfortable, too.

Lila seemed more restless than ever, thinner, more feverish. She toyed with her food and smoked cigarette after cigarette. She was forever waving to someone at a distant table, smiling brilliantly at a passerby.

All in all, it was scarcely a satisfactory meal. The food was exquisitely cooked and served, tempting Gypsy's appetite. Napery, silver and china were of the finest. An orchestra played, unseen, and the clack of ray tongues lent an air of festivity. Spring hats, silver foxes, costumes fresh from their Paris boxes, pleased the eye. And still Gypsy was not happy. She had been feeling, these tranquil weeks, that she was a very lucky person. Why, she had everything; a husband who adored her and who was good-looking, intelligent and ambitious; a comfortable little apartment; good friends; a loving family... and, crown of all, the promise of a child. Now she experienced the feeling that the scales had moved. Lila's side was in the ascendancy. Could it be that she was jealous of Lila? But that was absurd.

She frowned it down. But the thought persisted. Lila's entire background, her smooth, beautifully ordered existence threw into sharp relief Gypsy's own struggle with stepsons and laundry hampers and bathroom shelves.

"Seen Marko?" Lila asked idly, sipping her tea.

Gypsy felt herself flushing, the colour flowed into her face. She could see herself in a mirror just beyond: a girl with a plan blue hat covering her brown curls.

"Not lately, she said evenly. "I finished some library work I was doing for him, but not since then. That's several months ago."

"He was asking for you," Lila contributed. "Only last night. He said you hadn't been well. He was so sweet. You know how Marko is." She looked at Gypsy curiously, as though expecting confidences. But Gypsy only agreed tepidly. Marko was kind—was generous—but somehow you felt, always, there was some motive other than simple friendliness behind all of this. Perhaps merely because the man liked to be considered a sort of god, kinder and better than his fellows.

"We saw a lot of him in Palm Beach," Lila said languidly. "He had that woman there. But none of us paid any attention to her."

"What woman?" Gypsy was stung into attention.

"That creature who worked in his office several years ago," said Lila, smiling faintly as if at some amusing memory. "She's dreadful, really, but one accepts her—because of Marko."

"You mean she—they..."

Gypsy stammered, unable to frame the ugly words.

"Well, you can call her a common law wife, if you like," said Lila with a disagreeable laugh. "He's been taking her places for four or five years. I suppose that gives her a sort of standing."

What Marko can see in her nobody knows. But it's just a phase... it will pass."

Gypsy was sickened. Marko

could do anything—could, in the coarse phrase of the hour, "get away with anything" because he was rich and powerful. Eyes would be turned askance on less successful men, but Marko could do no wrong.

The room suddenly seemed changed. The chattering women had a sinister air. Everything wore an overtone of ugliness. What a world, thought Gypsy! What a topsy-turvy world for a child to be born into! These days, almost anything could send her into a passion of tears and Lila's words had touched a hidden spring of fears in her inmost being. She longed with all her soul to be safe at home in the little haven she and Tom had made.

"Don't you feel well?"

She stammered something. She couldn't be ill here—the room swayed and whirled around her and there was a black pit yawning to receive her. The waiter sprang to attention, pouring her a glass of water.

"I'm so sorry." The mists had cleared away and she was seeing everything in its true light again. "It's stupid of me. I felt giddy for a minute."

"Quite all right." But there had been, for the instant, a flash of something like pity and contempt in Lila's glance. "If you would be so stupid as to be having a baby!" that glance had said, plainer than plain!

On the surface everything was quite as it had been before. Gypsy made her farewells. It had been so sweet of Lila to ask her, and she had enjoyed it.

"Not at all, my dear. Always nice to see you."

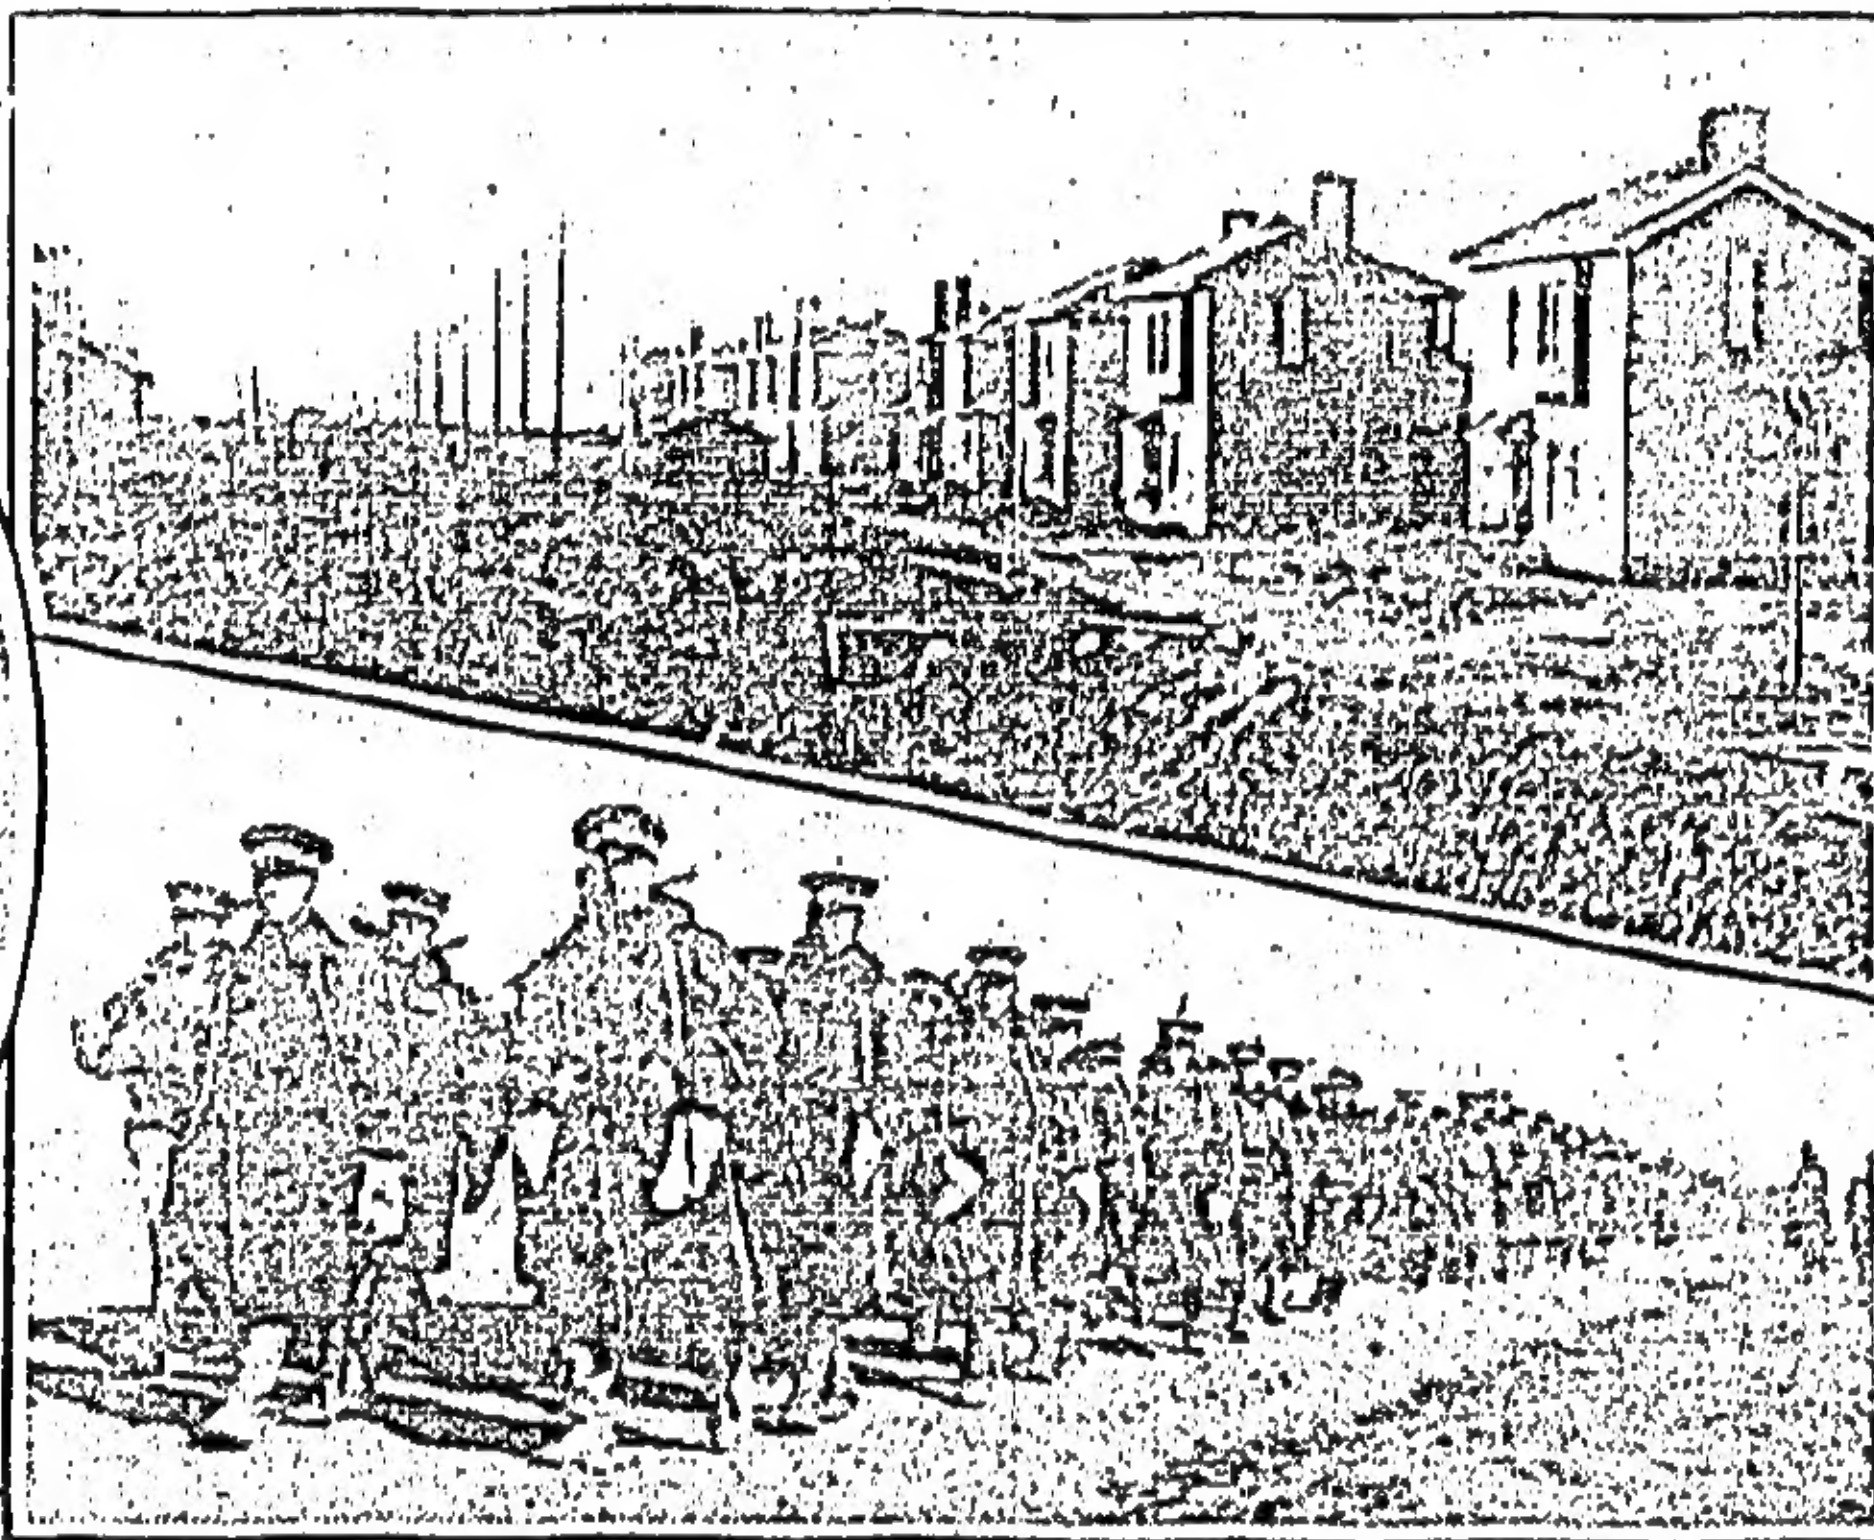

And then they had parted, Lila turning toward the avenue and Gypsy walking, rather slowly, eastward. Everything was the same.

IN MANCHURIA TO-DAY: EXCLUSIVE PICTURES

Manchuria's new athletic enthusiasm includes baseball, brought to Manchukuo by the Japanese. The skirted gentleman is "throwing in the first ball."

Rows of model dwellings, top, rise along the streets of Hsinking... all built on the western model, and suggesting nothing of the ancient ways of the Manchus... while the national police or gendarmes, shown above on the march, are strikingly like Japanese troops, carrying rifles, and hand mittens to protect them against the severe weather.

The ancient as well as the new is to be seen in the streets of Hsinking. Here a street "prophet" or fortune-teller reads a client's palm.

In Manchukuo, as in most other countries these days, the government goes after the children... here is an earnest group of young Manchus properly schooled by their elders behind them, giving a couple of lusty "banzais" for the new emperor, and waving placards with enthusiastic slogans for the new Manchu state. Many organizations for the training of youth are being instituted, even for the very young.

Sports of every kind are encouraged. Here you see daughters of the ancient Manchus indulging in the very modern game of tennis.

A vivid contrast between the old and the new in Hsinking. The coachman is driving an ancient vehicle somewhat like a Russian droshky, pulled by a horse, and the passenger is a modern car.

This poster, displayed at the enthronement of Pu Yi, represents the ambition of the new state to rise on a firm foundation.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"I've got another string to my bow now," laughs Spencer Tracy, star of "Looking for Trouble," the current 20th Century picture which is the feature film at the Queen's Theatre. "Any time I'm a flop as an actor, I can get a job as a telephone linesman—and I'm not kidding!" In the interests of accuracy, a hobby which is shared by both Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck, Tracy and Jack Oakie, who are co-starring in this romantic action thriller of telephone company life, were given a regular course of instruction in the art of the repair men of the telephone company before they began work on this picture. Tracy and Oakie, as well as their two screen sweethearts, Constance Cummings and Arline Judge, were first instructed in switchboard operation. Then the boys were taken out to some wooden poles in Hollywood and shown how to climb the poles with a telephone linesman's pike. A more dangerous lesson consisted in putting both Tracy and Oakie on sliding seats high up on the wires between telephone poles, and instructing them in twisting rings on messenger standards. Operating a tractor used for hauling cable reels proved easier than handling the reels themselves, but splicing underground cable rather stumped the boys. A spectacular stunt which they enjoyed, however, was that of raising telephone poles with derricks. They also had plenty of fun with the post-hole digger and earth-boring machine provided by the telephone company. In addition to the underground and overhead splicing of cables, Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie were initiated into the laying of tape-armoured cable in trenches, were shown the latest developments in television, teletype-writing, telephotography, ship-to-shore telephone service, and the handling of nation-wide hookups by the telephone company. "Looking for Trouble" is a United Artists release.

"Midnight Club"

Clive Brook and George Raft, are co-featured in "Midnight Club," the E. Phillips Oppenheim story, which Alexander Hall directed with George Sommes, and which opens on Thursday at the King's Theatre. Says Hall: "Both Brook and Raft command exceptionally large followings throughout the world. Despite the fact that to them I am a comparatively new director, they showed the utmost respect for me and my ideas. No petty bickering existed. They worked together perfectly, and the picture I think, shows it." Brook and Raft are supported in "Midnight Club" by Allison Skipworth and Helen Vinson. It's the story of an American detective's hunt to London to break up a great jewel-theft and smuggling ring which has baffled Scotland Yard. Raft

"The Show-Off"

A new romantic team makes its bow to local motion picture fans from the screen of the Alhambra Theatre tomorrow when Spencer Tracy and Madge Evans appear as husband and wife in "The Show-Off," adaptation of the famous stage play. Each of these players has sky-rocketed to fame during the past two years. Tracy has become one of the most popular male players, and Miss Evans has been voted the most popular leading lady of the screen. Their teaming for the first time creates a new romantic pair whose debut will be anticipated with interest. Choice of a vehicle for their initial appearance together brings to the screen one of the most famous stage plays of current theatrical history. From the moment of its first presentation on the New York stage, "The Show-Off" was a smash hit. It broke all attendance and long-run records in New York and became a hit on the stages of theatres in virtually every city in the United States and England. It is said to have netted a fortune to its playwright, George Kelly. The sparkling humour which made it a success on the stage has been amplified in the screen version. Tracy appears as the classic character, J. Aubrey Piper, the consummate egotist. He is the fellow who knows everything about everything, and isn't helpful about telling the world how good he is. Of all his wife's relations, he loves himself the best. Miss Evans plays the wife who tries to save him from ruin, and almost fails. The story, while built for comedy, contains moments of heart-stirring pathos. Others in the notable cast are Henry Wadsworth, Lois Wilson, Grant Mitchell, Clara Blandick, Alan Edwards and Claude Gillingwater. Charles F. Reisner directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Bottoms Up"

"Bottoms Up," at the King's Theatre, is reported to be rich in comedy, romance and the glamour of Hollywood. Against this background, Buddy DeSylva has filmed a romantic story. "Pat" Paterson, charming importation from the English stage, makes her American film debut in

"Bottoms Up". Playing the romantic leads opposite Miss Paterson are Spencer Tracy and John Boles. The comedy situations are contributed mainly by Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers and Harry Green. Other members of the impressive cast are Thelma Todd, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Dell Henderson, Suzanne Kaaren and Douglas Wood.

"Moulin Rouge"

Like wise apothecaries compounding a prescription with scrupulous care, Joseph Schenck and Darryl Zanuck assembled the ingredients of "Moulin Rouge," Constance Bennett's first starring vehicle for 20th Century Productions, a United Artists release now being shown at the Alhambra and World Theatres. For this musical de luxe they ordered the following:—A liberal measure of Constance Bennett in a dual role filled with intensely dramatic moments, and as a singer of songs destined to be sung by everyone. Franchot Tone, hailed as the screen's most romantic lover. Such songs as "Coffee in the Morning" and "Kisses at Night," "Song of Surrender" and "Boulevard of Broken Dreams." The prettiest chorines possible. Amazing cinema chemicals, these two. And you will be enchanted with their prescription.

BRITAIN'S WAR DEBT DECISION

Britain's decision to make no payment whatever to the United States on June 15, when the next instalment of the war debt interest falls due, is one which has been forced upon her. Had it not been for the passing of the Johnson Act, by which no distinction is drawn between formal defaulters and token payers, Britain would once again have made a payment. As matters are, she has been left with the alternatives of meeting all the interest charges due, totalling $262,000,000, or, since a token payment would not remove her from the category of an actual defaulter, of making no payment at all. The resolve to adopt the latter course makes the question of getting down to a final settlement one of urgency. The probability, indeed, is that the British decision was largely based on the hope that it would expedite negotiations with this end in view. The point to be stressed is that there is no question of Britain repudiating her obligations. That is made perfectly clear in the latest Note. In this connection, it must be remembered that ever since she made her first token payment, Britain has taken the stand that she is not disposed to revert to payment of the debt on the old basis. She is, however, willing and anxious to negotiate a revised agreement. The trouble has been that past approaches have not produced anything like unanimity of view between Britain and the United States as to the figure acceptable. Finland has been cited by America as the only war debtor to meet its obligations in full, and it has been stated that an agreement with Finland would be used as a "yardstick" in respect of other debtors. Against this, we have to put the fact that even a "Finnish model revision" would not meet the British viewpoint. Such a settlement would be based upon a virtual cancellation of interest charges. Coupled with other adjustments, this would bring the British obligation down to something like two billion dollars. Even this sum would, in Congress's present temper, be regarded as profligate generosity. Precisely what Britain would be prepared to offer has not been disclosed, but it is said that Sir Frederick Leith Ross, when he visited the States last autumn, proposed a tenth of two billion dollars, payable in a lump sum. Although President Roosevelt has shown himself more hospitable towards the debtors' case than Congress, the British offer of last autumn left him and his subordinate negotiators cold. It is clear, therefore, that a wide gap exists between the British and American conceptions. How to bridge it is the problem of the moment. But two things are clear in regard to the British attitude—there is no intention to repudiate the debt, nor is there to be any departure from the principle of the Balfour Note, by which Britain declared her intention of seeking no more from her debtors than she requires to meet her obligations to the United States.

NOTES OF THE DAY

SPLITTING HAIRS

Mr. Norman Davis splits hairs at Geneva and Mr. Anthony Eden supports him. In what circumstances can tangible results emerge from such a spirit? Mutual Assistance Pacts may, as Mr. Davis asserted, be outside the mandate of the Disarmament Conference, in themselves. But Mr. Davis admits of the need for guarantees of execution within a Disarmament Treaty, and if mutual assistance pacts appear the safest guarantees of execution, resistance to mere consideration is anomalous to say the least. M. Litvinoff is really inviting acceptance of the principle that every man's hand should be against an aggressor—his scheme implies no more and no less. He may be charged with thinking chiefly of the Soviet's skin, but that in itself is no argument against the principle he defines. If his proposals offer security for the Soviet, they may offer security to all, if all come in. But the United States declines and Mr. Eden trends in Mr. Davis's footsteps. He may believe with M. Litvinoff that until the nations assume all the obligations that go with the ideal of collective responsibility for peace, permanent peace can never be established; but he also knows that there is no comfort for anyone inside such an undertaking while the United States remains determined to stay outside.

TEST TEAM

England's team for the First Test, or rather, the nomination of fourteen players for the Trent Bridge game, hardly qualifies the Selection Committee for the school of daring experimenters. The only choice that might be termed interesting is that which has fallen upon K. Farnes, Cambridge and Essex. There is hardly one other member of the likely attack who looks a possible Bradman-beater, unless it be Geary, who doubtless impressed the selectors at Leicester a few weeks ago. Larwood is out because, despite early buzzsaws, his foot has not yet recovered from the strange injury that incapacitated him in Australia. A suggestion made that secret influences played a part, that Larwood's absence is attributable to another "friendly gesture" to the Australians, may be dismissed, crudely, as boloney.

SOVIET IN FAR-EAST

Equally absurd, too, is the report, from quite another sphere of current interest, that Red troops have crossed the Manchurian border and occupied Tungtashen. Moscow's denial was scarcely necessary. The Soviet's policy in the Far East will be well understood by this time. Moscow expects trouble and, far from hiding her fears, makes preparations to meet it when and/or if it comes. But the Soviets are doing anything but seeking a clash. Their military limitations are best known to themselves. As to the importance of such provocation propaganda, this obviously depends upon the source.

U.S. BONDS IN DEFAULT

The suggestion by a reader that Mr. Neville Chamberlain might submit certain defaulted bonds to the United States Treasury in part payment of war debt obligations strikes a piquant note, although it is not thereby rendered any more helpful. Unfortunately, perhaps, these bonds are not bonds of the United States within the meaning of the funding agreement. They represent loans to certain of the States in the South, funds employed in fighting the North and the Federal idea. As they are repudiated by the borrowers, there is double reason for refusal by the Federal authorities to recognise their validity. There is, of course, no telling what would be Washington's reaction to the event of a British Chancellor making a collection and mustering the nerve to present them. They might be accepted as a tribute to bravado. And again, Washington might be only too glad to get hold of them, at any price, to put an end at last to the constant outdragging of this skeleton in the cupboard of American international finance.

can conceptions. How to bridge it is the problem of the moment. But two things are clear in regard to the British attitude—there is no intention to repudiate the debt, nor is there to be any departure from the principle of the Balfour Note, by which Britain declared her intention of seeking no more from her debtors than she requires to meet her obligations to the United States.

BEAUTY SLEEP

By GERALD HEARD

"SLEEP that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care"—it does, but do we know how it does it? Till lately we have known practically nothing about sleep. Though all of us, when we are well, do it every night, we do not learn by experience here. In fact the general experience is that the older we grow the less we sleep, though the more we wish to. Now at last we are beginning to find out a few of sleep's secrets—at least we are beginning to learn why we need sleep, and on the other hand why, when we feel we need sleep most, it eludes us.

Sleep is not merely rest; it is renovation and repair. Experiments carried out with healthy undergraduates showed, this odd fact. For the first three hours after falling asleep the metabolism of the body actually increases. When the officials and clerks are gone, then the cleaning and repairing staff have to get to work. It has been known for some time that wounds heal quicker if the patient can sleep. It is only after the first three hours or so that the deeper centres of the body, after tidying up the mess we have left, can themselves turn in and rest. This explains why, though a person may get on for a long time on three or four hours of sleep, in the end he usually finds himself nervously overdrawn. If you take no more than three hours' sleep you are living on loans advanced from your deeper nervous system, and sooner or later you will have to meet the overdraft.

Of course, people do vary in their need of sleep, but probably not nearly as much as we have supposed. It balances out in the end. He who regularly cuts the nightly hours due to sleep will probably be found sooner or later repaying them by days and even weeks a-bed.

ANOTHER REASON.

Research has disclosed another reason why we need so much sleep. Most of us think if we sleep well we sleep all night through "like a log." This is a mistake. A drugged man, a man who has been tortured may sleep with death-like immobility—not the healthy, sound sleeper. It has been found that the usual spell of steady sleep is generally not more than ten minutes.

After that the sleeper shifts himself, alters breathing, comes much nearer to the surface of consciousness, generally turns over. Then once more he switches back down into sleep. In short, he rocks himself. That is why it is important to sleep in the dark and, even more important, in the quiet. Every light, every murmur is probably attended to. It has been found that long before the sleeper wakes his muscles will tauten if a light is brought near him. He is beginning to rouse himself long before he knows it. Sound is an even worse disturber. Nature lets us close our eyes but never our ears. We are always ready to notice a suspicious sound. Sleep, therefore, in the still hours is a sleep of a higher quality. In between the semi-rouses we slip deeper. Our ears report "All clear," and for a few minutes we snatch a profounder rest.

It sounds a restless business, but we must remember that Nature's ways of balancing up wear and repair are not ours. The great lung muscles, for instance, and the heart muscles are so made that, as they must always be on the go, they get their rest in between each breath and beat. A narrow margin, but enough.

Why can't we rest in the same economical way? The answer probably is that we are so intensely alive. Being fully conscious all the day is a tremendous strain and we pay for it by blacking out all the night—or at least if we were really good business men with our bodies we should pay these essential debts right by night as they fall due.

AN ESSENTIAL

It is clear, then, that sleep is an essential, and that brings us to the essential question which research is beginning to answer: Why, if we so need sleep, does sleep so often escape us? If we need air, we breathe. If we need sleep, why shouldn't we be able to close our eyes as we open our lungs and let nature do the rest?

Some people can, and the study of them and of animals has shown why so many of us can't. Sleep is an act of attention. You have got to shift your attention. With animals and some men nature seems to do that for them. They know how to attend to her orders and submit. But "brain workers" have taught themselves to interfere—never to submit to Nature without asking why, or at least becoming self-conscious about it. That kind of attention is fatal.

Think how you are riding a bicycle and, at least when you are learning, you will probably tumble off. Think how you are remembering a long poem, and the tongue stammers, or the fingering of a piano passage, and the fingers stumble. This is an illustration of what some psychologists have called the Law of Reversed Effort. The more you think about trying the less you can do the trick.

Our minds to-day are trained more and more to analyse everything. We are always trying, as we say, to follow a line of thought. That frame of mind is fatal to sleep. You must, as it were, dilute the mind, so things largely—a little out of focus—before sleep will come. That analytic attention has quite extraordinary power of keeping us awake.

This, then, seems the reason why we sleep so badly. We have so little control over our minds that we cannot stop them thinking; we can't switch over, declutch. We keep on saying, "Oh, how I wish I could sleep," but really prefer to go on thinking.

A FEW HINTS.

So a few hints on how to sleep, or rather, how to avoid keeping oneself awake, may help. The first thing is attention: learn to shift that. It is half the battle. That is the truth behind watching the sheep go through the hedge and the other pictorial tricks for overcoming sleeplessness.

But do not count them with a limit of, say, 100. If you do your mind says, "What! 50 already gone and I'm still wide awake!" At the century it says with self-congratulatory triumph, "There, I knew—It has really been looking forward to being still awake at the 100! A far better way is to pay attention to the background of your thought. Nearly all the while, behind your reasonable thoughts, there is passing a stream of thought-pictures. The Very Idea!

EXPLANATIONS AND APOLOGIES

By George

OWING to an omission on the part of the postman we were not present at the Governor's Ball on Monday but then most of the elite were not. Anyway we were very busy and trust that this excuse will serve as an apology to those who looked forward to our presence.

A feature of the evening was a Paul Jones which set the stone rolling and served as an introduction to many sparring partners who were waiting to fall into a clinch.

Coming as they did at a time when the Peak was feeling the housing depression more than a little, the invitations to the ball have started another back-to-the-Peak movement consisting of those people who received an invitation where they never expected one and others who expected one but never received it and have now got to pretend how indifferent they are.

The report that our colleague Mr. Kelly, was present at the ball by express invitation in recognition of his gallant rescue attempt on Monday are slightly exaggerated but he was one of the select gate-crashers who were allowed to remain.

The reason he attended, we gather, was that having spoiled his only everyday suit by jumping into the harbour he was reduced to going about in evening dress and there was only one function on Monday where he could decently wear that.

Lessons in Journalism

THE NEWS EDITOR.

The news editor is a very clever man. It takes a clever man to do a little work as he does in such a long time and yet always manage to be busy.

A cross between a sub-editor and a policeman, the news editor stands on one of the lowest social planes of vegetable life and is seldom seen out in daylight for fear of being attacked.

This creature has inordinate power in his little sphere and exercises it ruthlessly. Never being allowed to forget that he was once a reporter, he practices the meanest tricks on that long suffering tribe.

Next to sleeping, his most potent faculty is sarcasm and while industrious reporters have been using their spare time sharpening pencils or brushing their hair in the office he has been known to stroll casually up to them and say: "Look here old man, when you've finished your toilet and spoken to the girl on the phone, I wonder if you'd mind slipping down to Shaokwan. There's been six murders there this afternoon but don't bother if you're busy. I expect we can cut it out of the Daily Dodaa to-morrow."

If you will notice them. Look at that easy, aimless procession. In a few minutes it has drawn you in and you are asleep.

Another help is not mental but bodily, and so perhaps more helpful in this age of education when we find it so much easier to do things with our bodies than with our minds. Change your breathing. Listen to a sleeping person. His breathing, when loud enough to be heard, is the opposite of conscious breathing. When you are very conscious of your breathing, when you are nervous, you hear the breath drawn in, not the breath sent out. It is the sleeper's breathing out that you hear. A snore is only a very successful breathing out. But all deep-sleep breathing is a sort of reversed gasp.

Try it next time you sleep badly. Don't dash at it. Gradually change over from noticing your breathing-in to attending to your breathing-out. Don't be too interested. Pay also a little casual attention (the attention of a lazy person in a garden to birds skimming over a pond) to those vague, inconsequent pictures which are passing through the back of your mind.

You will have mastered the art of shifting attention. You will be asleep before you know it.

"I'll give you just two minutes to get off my property."

full statement of the reasons which convinced them that the system of inter-governmental war debt obligations as it existed before the Hoover Moratorium could not be revived, and that a radical revision of the existing settlements was essential. The United States Government, in their Note of December 7, 1932, welcomed the suggestion for a close examination of the whole subject between the two countries.

The British Government paid the instalment due on December 15, 1932, in gold, explaining that this payment was not to be regarded as a resumption of the annual payments under the existing agreement, and that it was made because the United States Government had stated that, in their opinion, such payment would greatly increase the prospect of a satisfactory approach to the whole problem.

FRUITLESS TALKS.

Discussions took place both in the spring and autumn last year, but it was not found possible to arrive at a settlement acceptable to the two countries. On June 15 and December 15, 1933, the British Government made token payments in acknowledgment of their debt, and on each occasion the President of the United States expressed his personal view that he would not regard the British Government as in default.

Mr. Chamberlain continued: "The British Government would have been prepared to make a further payment on the 15th instant in acknowledgment of the debt, and without prejudice to their right again to present a case for its readjustment, on the assumption that they would again have received the President's declaration that he would not consider them in default. But they understand that in consequence of recent legislation passed in the United States, such a declaration is no longer possible, so that the procedure adopted by common agreement in 1933 cannot be followed on the present occasion."

THE SUM DUE.

"In fact, our Ambassador was informed by the United States Administration on May 11, that any Government failing to pay in full the instalment due under the existing agreement on June 15, would have to be regarded as in default, and on May 25, the Treasury of the United States addressed a communication to the British Government setting out details of the various items, including arrears of 196 million dollars due last year, and amounting altogether to a sum of 262 million dollars, or over 50 million pounds sterling, due on the 15th instant."

"His Majesty's Government were therefore, in these circumstances, faced with the alternative either of paying this sum of 50 million pounds in full and of paying a further sum of over 20 million pounds on December 15 next—that is to say, over 70 million pounds for the current year—or of suspending all interim payments pending a final revision by agreement of the existing war debt settlement."

IMPOSSIBLE SITUATION.

"The first of these alternatives would necessitate corresponding demand by the British Government from their own war debtors, for it would not be possible to contemplate a situation in which Britain would be called upon to resume payment of their war obligations to others in full, while continuing to suspend all demands for payment of war obligations due to them. The resumption of full payments to the United States would therefore revive the whole system of inter-governmental war debt payments and would postpone indefinitely the chances of local recovery."

"After full deliberation, the British Government came to the conclusion that they could not assume the responsibility of adopting a course attended by such disastrous consequences. Accordingly, they have addressed to the United States Government a Note in which, after briefly restating their views on the whole question of war debts, they state that, while deeply regretting the circumstances which have imposed upon them the necessity for such a decision, they have concluded that they must suspend further payments until it becomes possible to discuss the ultimate settlement of inter-governmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement."

NO REPUDIATION.

"The British Government have again made it clear that they have no intention of repudiating their obligations, and will be prepared to enter upon further discussions on the subject at any time when, in the opinion of the President of the United States, such discussions would be likely to produce results of value."—British Wireless.

applies at all. This action apparently relates to an offence of larceny of property stolen, and it seems to give your Worship power, on proper information, to search for such stolen property. There is no question of search for property in this case at all. The books are in possession of the Company. There is no question of these books having been stolen and being found in a certain place. It may be that this section applies, but I thought, on reading it, that it does not. I should like to argue this point further if necessary.

Mr. Hamilton:—Your position is that the proper course is to serve a notice on the Company for the production of the books?

Mr. Davidson:—It is equally obvious that we could have applied for a search warrant without giving notice to anybody at all; instead, we are applying now. There can be no question about this being within the section.

MATTER OF INTERPRETATION.

Mr. Hamilton:—So far, the position is that we have a section of which you take one view and Mr. Lo the other. That is not being argued, in any case; it is merely a question of interpretation of English, and, as I take it, it means four judges will have to decide it. I think Mr. Lo had better have 24 hours' remand if he wants to argue the matter.

Mr. Davidson:—If it is desirable at all, the delay of 24 hours may be too much.

Mr. Hamilton:—I am not quite clear as to what difficulty 24 hours' delay will make for the prosecution.

Mr. Davidson:—Possibly none. Mr. Lo is willing to go down there with me and take possession of the books.

WEEK'S REMAND.

Mr. Hamilton:—I presume you must have some case, Mr. Lo?

Mr. Lo agreed there was a case.

Mr. Hamilton:—I will then remand the case for one week. If the matter can be adjusted without issuing a warrant, it will be more satisfactory to both sides.

In answer to Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Davidson said that it was likely the case would be ready for trial before the end of next month.

Defendant was accordingly remanded for one week on bail of $10,000.

WAR DEBT POLICY

BRITISH STAND APPROVED

New York, June 5.

A fresh effort to achieve liquidation of War debts under new conditions is now possible, in the opinion of the Washington correspondent of the New York Times, who adds that notwithstanding the adverse comments certain quarters in Congress are generally inclined to endorse Great Britain's attitude which is widely regarded as tending to clear the air.

Officials privately estimate that the Johnson Act, a rebuff to the sponsors of the token payment system, will cost the United States about $40,000,000 by the end of the year.—Reuter.

Attitude in City

London, June 5.

The British Note on War Debts, made public here, has been well received by the City generally and it is hoped that it will bring matters to a head and perhaps strengthen President Roosevelt's position vis-a-vis the large Congressional body which is still demanding America's "pound of flesh."

The market is somewhat puzzled by the failure of sterling to react favourably to the news, as the decision not to make even a token payment should have resulted in a temporary alleviation of the pressure on sterling. However, the undercurrent of firmness in dollars and francs is considered too strong to be influenced by the non-payment.

The British Control Fund, after holding off operations, is now supporting sterling against the franc.

War Debts Dead

London, June 5.

Up to the present, the European views expressed endorse the attitude of the British Government set forth in the note to America.

"War debts are dead," says Le Midi in Paris, and declared that Britain has rallied to the French thesis that the death of reparations entails the death of War debts. Britain's refusal to pay the June 15 instalment makes it doubly certain that France will not pay, the paper adds.

Surprise, mingled with relief, is the general Italian reaction to the British message, it is learned from Rome. It was expected that a larger token payment would be offered and business men are relieved that Italy has not been left the alternative of paying more or defaulting by herself.

Like the French, Signor Mussolini has always held that the payment of reparations and war debts were inseparably connected. The Italian decision regarding the War debt is likely to be announced during the week.—Reuter.

Nothing had changed; merely two women had met for luncheon and had parted. But, for Gypsy, there was a difference. Her crystal ball of contentment had been shattered.

To Tom she said nothing of the experience except that she had seen Lila, had lunched with her, that it had been "nice." He, with his impervious masculine eyes, had seen nothing. He did not notice Gypsy looking about her with discontented eyes. He did not observe that she sighed now over the bed making and groaned over the dishes. He only knew that his home was still well kept and his meals were served. He thought Gypsy shared the deep happiness he himself felt.

The days marched by. April passed but in the city you would scarcely notice this, except that tulips showed their heads in the park beds and all the trees in the narrow ways were budding. On Sundays when the young Weavers went over to Jersey they saw that spring was really come to stay. Mr. Morell told in his borders, digging in fertilizer, raking and burning leaves. On the first of May, as was his time honoured custom, he planted his annuals. Gypsy followed him about, looking prettier than usual in an old crepe de chine frock, washed creamy white, with a woolly scarf around her shoulders.

She sat in an old basket chair and rested her chin on her hands, dreaming idly. Her father dug a trench with a trowel and dropped in the seeds from a bright painted packet. Phlox drummondii candytuft... bachelor's button... kypophylla... Gypsy could shut her eyes and smell the good earth, the heavenly scent of freshly turned loam.

"Nice, Daddy," she said dreamily.

"Ummm..." He went about, dropping seeds into the little ridges, covering them up again. He had, himself, this day a deep sense of well being; things growing made a man hope again.

"It's a good time of year," he said seriously. "I like it." He had his old garden clothes on. His lawyer's hands were grubby from contact with the moist loam. He was growing bald. He looked neither rich nor successful, nor was he, but Gypsy felt a swelling of the heart. She loved him. He was so good and real and fine. As real as the sun or the soil or the rain. The vague unhappiness that had stayed with her ever since she saw Lila dissolved like mist in the sun. She stood up, suddenly, running toward Tom, who came down the garden path.

She clung to him, laughing. "You know something, Tommy?"

"No." He held her close, thinking her lovelier than ever. Her new estate had laid a sort of wild rose bloom on her.

"We've got to have a place of our own soon. A house, and a garden. Roots of our own."

"That's right." He regarded her gravely. He had thought that himself many, many times. But it was quite out of the question. They couldn't manage it.

But he humoured Gypsy now. She was so eager, so sudden and passionate about it.

With a sort of quiet laughter in his heart, he echoed her words. "We've got to have a place of our very own."

But how? How was it ever to be managed? He did not know.

Strong And Healthy!

Sunny days at the sea-side, what a splendid way to build up health and strength, but even under such conditions little health troubles creep in. The child may eat something which upsets his stomach or he may get a sudden chill, whatever the cause may be a dose of Baby's Own Tablets will usually be all that is required to correct the trouble.

Wise parents have Baby's Own Tablets always handy whether they are at home or away on holiday, for they know that these tablets are the best means for keeping the little ones' internal organs clean and clear of waste matter, thereby preventing the development of disease germs which flourish in a congested food tract.

Pleasant in taste, children like them, and there is never any fuss about taking them. The prescription of a physician, Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed to contain no ingredient likely in any way to harm the delicate internal organs of young children, and they may be given to the youngest infant in arms with perfect safety.

For constipation, indigestion, colds and cramps, colic, wind, feverishness, diarrhoea, worms, and other health troubles which assail little children, Baby's Own Tablets will be found of the greatest benefit, rapidly restoring the little one to normal health and strength. TO-DAY'S RACING CLASSIC || RECREIO'S CHAMPIONSHIP AT EPSOM DOWNS TEAM IN MAKING

EVERYTHING SET FOR JOHN BULL'S BIG FLUTTER

COLOMBO FACES SEVERAL FORMIDABLE RIVALS

Epsom, June 6.
This afternoon the world famous Derby will be run here at Epsom, and it promises to be one of the greatest races in history.

Nearly a million people are expected at the switchback track before the race is run shortly after 3 p.m. British summer time. The vast downs being only ten miles from London, form a convenient setting for such a crowd, many of whom look upon Derby day as an occasion for a great picnic.

Shortly after daybreak electric trains will run every few minutes from London and other points to the race-course station at Tattenham corner, conveying one long stream of people, while two other nearby stations will bring more crowds to the races. Traffic arrangements are completed for guiding vehicles on all roads leading to the downs, and hundreds of police assisted by aerial observers will be on duty at every vantage point for miles around. Those who are coming by air will land at nearby Croydon and finish the journey by automobile.

At one time the motor and his donkeycart made his way to Epsom along the road and in open carriage, while the crowds went in various conveyances drawn by horses. Nowadays it is a procession of automobiles, old and new, motorcoaches holding upwards of fifty passengers, and the familiar London buses. Even the motor must be changing to the mechanical age, as he is rarely seen in his perky outfit.

HUGE PICNIC GROUND.

The downs resembles a huge picnic ground, only the food and drink being free of temporary constructions. Hundreds of marquees and tents for food and drink have been put up. These are intersected by bookmakers' stands and banners, hobby horses and swing-boats, together with all the paraphernalia of a fun fair. Fish stalls, meat pie stalls, ice-cream hawker are everywhere even the portable one horsepower London coffee stall has made its appearance.

The gypsies are here in their hundreds complete with smartly painted caravans, all neatly parked in one sector at the back of the Grand stands. They run the various side-shows, while their womenfolk pursue the art of fortune-telling or "crossing the palm." No top-hatted sport with fashionably dressed lady companion can resist the pleading of a gypsy woman with the latest addition to her family nestling inside her shawl.

Extra stands nearly half a mile long have been erected specially for the meet. These stretch almost from Tattenham corner to the Grand stands near the winning post. Tons of eatables from the humble sandwich to an elaborate lunch are ready for consumption. All refreshment booths are well stocked with bottles and barrels of beer, while the various bars in stands and enclosures have large supplies of every known drink from beer to champagne.

PICK OF THE 3 YEAR-OLDS.

The horses which are responsible for all the excitement are the finest three-year-olds in the country. They are also very valuable, and while the winner's prize is in the region of £12,000 the actual value of the winner might easily be five or six times that amount. No less than 300 of them were entered for to-day's classic event almost as soon as they were foaled.

Many millions sterling will change hands over the Derby to-morrow, on which bets ranging from one shilling to thousands of pounds are vied. It is a very old race, dating back to 1780, and takes its name from the twelfth Earl of Derby. The Derby family have won it three times, the last occasion being in 1933, when Lord Derby won a very popular victory with Hyperion. The distance is slightly over 12 furlongs, and the track is shaped like a horseshoe and the horses race clockwise. The first four furlongs are on the ascent, then the track drops gradually to Tattenham corner which is about four furlongs from the winning post. From there the ground is fairly level till a couple of hundred yards from the winning post where it rises slightly.

THE FAVOURITE.

Lord Glanley's Colombo will start favourite to-day, with the Aga Khan's Umidwar and Lord Woolavington's Eastern equal second favourites. Eastern originally belonged to John Dewar's stable, but was recently purchased by Lord Woolavington, and is regarded as a fine challenger to Colombo.

Colombo has been a raging favourite. Bred from the Derby winner, Manu, the horse was champion two-year-old. It cost only £500 and already has won well over £18,000 in stakes. It is expected that if he wins the Derby, his winnings will be about £40,000. Among the greatly fancied candidates, which have risen in public favour recently, is Windsor Lad, whose performance in winning the Chester Vase makes his Derby chances considerably brighter. Its owner, the Maharajah of Bhopal, is enthusiastic about the horse's prospects, and considers it capable of much better things than Colombo.

Medieval Knight, another Dewar nomination, and the French-trained Admiral Drake figure prominently in the public eye at the time of writing, and can be expected to perform well this afternoon.—United Press.

BOYCOTT OF SHANGHAI L.T.A.

Disappointed at the refusal of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association to accept the entry to the League of the Cathay Club, a new Chinese organization recently launched, leading Chinese tennis players last week held a meeting in camera and decided to boycott the Association.

They declared their intention of refusing to compete in any of the Association's Leagues until the Cathay Club should be admitted. Gordon Lum, Secretary of the Cathay Tennis Club informed the Press.

When the League officially opened yesterday with a series of matches between Clubs, Chinese players adhered to their decision and did not appear.

Gordon Lum said that the reason given by the Association for refusing to admit the Cathay Club was that they did not have standard grass courts, but played on courts known as "En-Tout-Cas," a patent preparation. Lum added that in view of the fact that other courts already in the League had only hard courts, the Chinese members of the Cathay Club thought that the Association's decision was unfair. They therefore decided to boycott the League.

Northants (381 & 253-6 dec.) beat Worcester 363 & 52-0 on 1st innings.

OTHER MATCHES.

Australians (367 & 338-3) drew with Lancashire (285).
England (472-4 dec. & 19-0) beat the Rest (218 & 271) by ten wickets.

London June 5.
Most of the first class cricket matches ended tamely to-day, only two carrying outright results with them, and the rest being left drawn.

In the county championship, Yorkshire lost valuable points to Kent on the first innings, the south coast county men again scoring freely in their first venture to the wicket. To offset this, Sussex were held to first innings spoils against Warwick, and of the five county games concluded, only Leicester and Derbyshire enjoyed outright wins. Several good performances were accomplished with bat and ball. Larwood and Voce, absentees from England's Test team, both got busy with the ball against Derbyshire, although their efforts proved in vain.

Watt, the young Kent bowler, had Yorkshire guessing in their first innings, and Townsend of Derbyshire, as well as Howarth and Perks of Worcester, were busy with their trundling.

BATSMEN ALSO BUSY.

Notwithstanding, individual scoring feats were up to par. Barber for Yorkshire (in their second innings) and Timms for Northants, both passed the double century mark, and nine other batsmen played three figure innings.

England beat the Rest in very convincing style, knocking off a more 19 runs without loss. The Nawab of Pataudi and Leslie Ames continued their unfinished fifth wicket partnership which had yielded 231 runs, and were able to carry the total along to 472 before the declaration was made. By that time the partnership had realised 299, and had put WYATT'S BROKEN THUMB.

MAY POSSIBLY KEEP HIM OUT OF TEST.

London, June 5.

R.E.S. Wyatt, nominated captain for England's Test team on Friday, injured himself during the England v Rest trial match yesterday, and to-day it was revealed by X-ray that his right thumb had sustained a slight fracture as a result of being struck by a fast ball while Wyatt was batting.

It is the bone across the top of the thumb which is injured, and although Wyatt thinks he will be able to play in the Test, the selectors are waiting until Thursday before definitely deciding.—Reuter.

England in a winning position. In spite of a gallant knock by B. H. Valentine, the Kent amateur, the Rest could not avert defeat. They just avoided the innings reverse, Valentine's 108 not out allowing the team to set England 19 to win.

Verity and Mitchell did some excellent bowling in this innings, the former capturing 4 for 34 and his colleague 5 for 121.

BATTING PRACTICE.

W. M. Woodfull and W. Brown, the Australians, managed to get some batting practice at the expense of Lancashire. There was never any hope of a definite finish and the match petered out with the Australians scoring 338 for 3 in their second innings. Woodfull's contribution was 172 not out, and Brown's 119.

Sussex scored freely against Warwick, but could not make the most of a first innings advantage, and had to share the points.

In reply to Warwick's first knock of 219, Sussex scored 474 for 7 declared, but Warwick easily saved the game by returning to hit up 313 for two wickets.

Timms played a sparkling innings for Northants, when out of a total of 388 he made 213. In the face of this total, Perks actually took five wickets for 73 runs.

Worcester made a gallant effort to win first innings points, and only just failed, their aggregate being 363.

TENNIS PLAYERS WHO HAVE RAPIDLY DEVELOPED

GIVE EXCELLENT DISPLAY AGAINST K.C.C.

(By "Veritas").

The Club de Recreio will not win the "A" Division tennis league title this year, but if they continue in the way they are progressing (and have been for the last three years), they will enjoy this distinction in the course of the next two or three seasons.

Against the Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday, the Recreio gave a most impressive display, and it is a source of gratification to see these young and enthusiastic players, who only a few summers ago were playing in the "C" Division, make such rapid strides as to very easily hold their own against one of the best teams in the senior division.

Such development speaks volumes for their keenness and assiduity, and when further experience has taught them to temper aggressive attacking tactics with restraint, and to distinguish quicker the right ball to try and ace and the one to play safely, they will climb to the top of the local tennis league ladder.

At the present the Recreio have three well-balanced pairs prominent among them being F. J. Remedios and H. A. Barros (who I am told are the club champions) and A. V. Remedios and J. Goncalves.

STYLISH YOUNG PLAYER.

Goncalves is one of the most stylish of the younger school of Hongkong players, and like his companions, he has concentrated almost solely on storming tactics at the net. In the first two sets yesterday he was extremely efficient overhead and on the volley, but appeared rather overawed when up against the Fincher brothers, who played the home pairs at their own game and proved a little more adept.

G. A. Noronha and C. A. Barretto are another improving pair. They too have graduated from the "C" Division during the last four years, but are still a little short of experience. There was an apparent weakness in their covering.

The finish to the match was full of excitement. The visitors needed half a point to win, and everything depended on Hyde and Rodger. The K.C.C. pair were trailing at 6-6, but succeeded in breaking through service, and obtaining the required half a point.

On the whole I felt the K.C.C. were a trifle lucky to pull off the match, and the Recreio, who were much better balanced, certainly deserved to share the spoils.

E. F. FINCHER'S OVERHEAD.

The Fincher brothers, of course, turned the tide for the visitors. Ernest has struck brilliant form, and at the net is impeccable, his overhead being unanswerable. Teddy found the rather long grass and soft court somewhat contrary and could not get his driving going.

Grose played an excellent brand of tennis in company with Guest. The latter, apart from lobbing, was well below form, ground strokes being all astray. Grose, although overtaxed, rose to the occasion, and generally secured points when most needed.

Hyde and Rodger made the mistake of hugging the baseline in the first two sets and played into the hands of the net-campaing Portuguese. Towards the end they adopted the initiative with success, and certainly made possible the K.C.C. victory.

FORMIDABLE S.C.A.A.

The defeat of the Indian Recreation Club on the South China Athletic courts were not entirely unexpected as I endeavoured to indicate on Monday. But being without the services of J. A. Cassumbhoy made all the difference to the Indians.

On the face of it, it might appear to have been wiser had the visitors reverted to the old-time formation of the cousins, but as it is extremely doubtful whether Hoosen and Razack would have been strong enough even to get a set, the Indians were really wise to bring in Hoosen with Sirdar Rumlahn.

Sirdar was unable to carry Hoosen sufficiently against the strong Chinese couple, who on their own courts are as formidable as the C.R.C. first string, and their victory was therefore fairly inevitable. Nevertheless the Indians held their own over the first four matches, two of which

The other results were in accordance with expectations, the C.R.C. first and second strings winning. In company with Craigengower and the C.R.C. third team, the United Services Recreation Club have yet to win a point.

BOWLS TITLES

SEVERAL TIES IN OPEN SINGLES

GUTIERREZ WINS

The first round of the Open Singles lawn bowls championship was commenced yesterday afternoon when several ties were decided.

On the Police R. C. green where L. A. Gutierrez of the Club de Recreo met B. E. Maughan the Yacht Club player, the game was very even throughout and it was not until the 22nd head that the former champion qualified for second round. On the 21st head the scores were 19-19 and then the Portuguese representative scored a two to give him the necessary 21 points.

T. F. Stanton of the Tai Koo R. C. eliminated Y. Abbas of the Craigengower C. C. by 21 shots to 11 on the Hongkong Football Club Green.

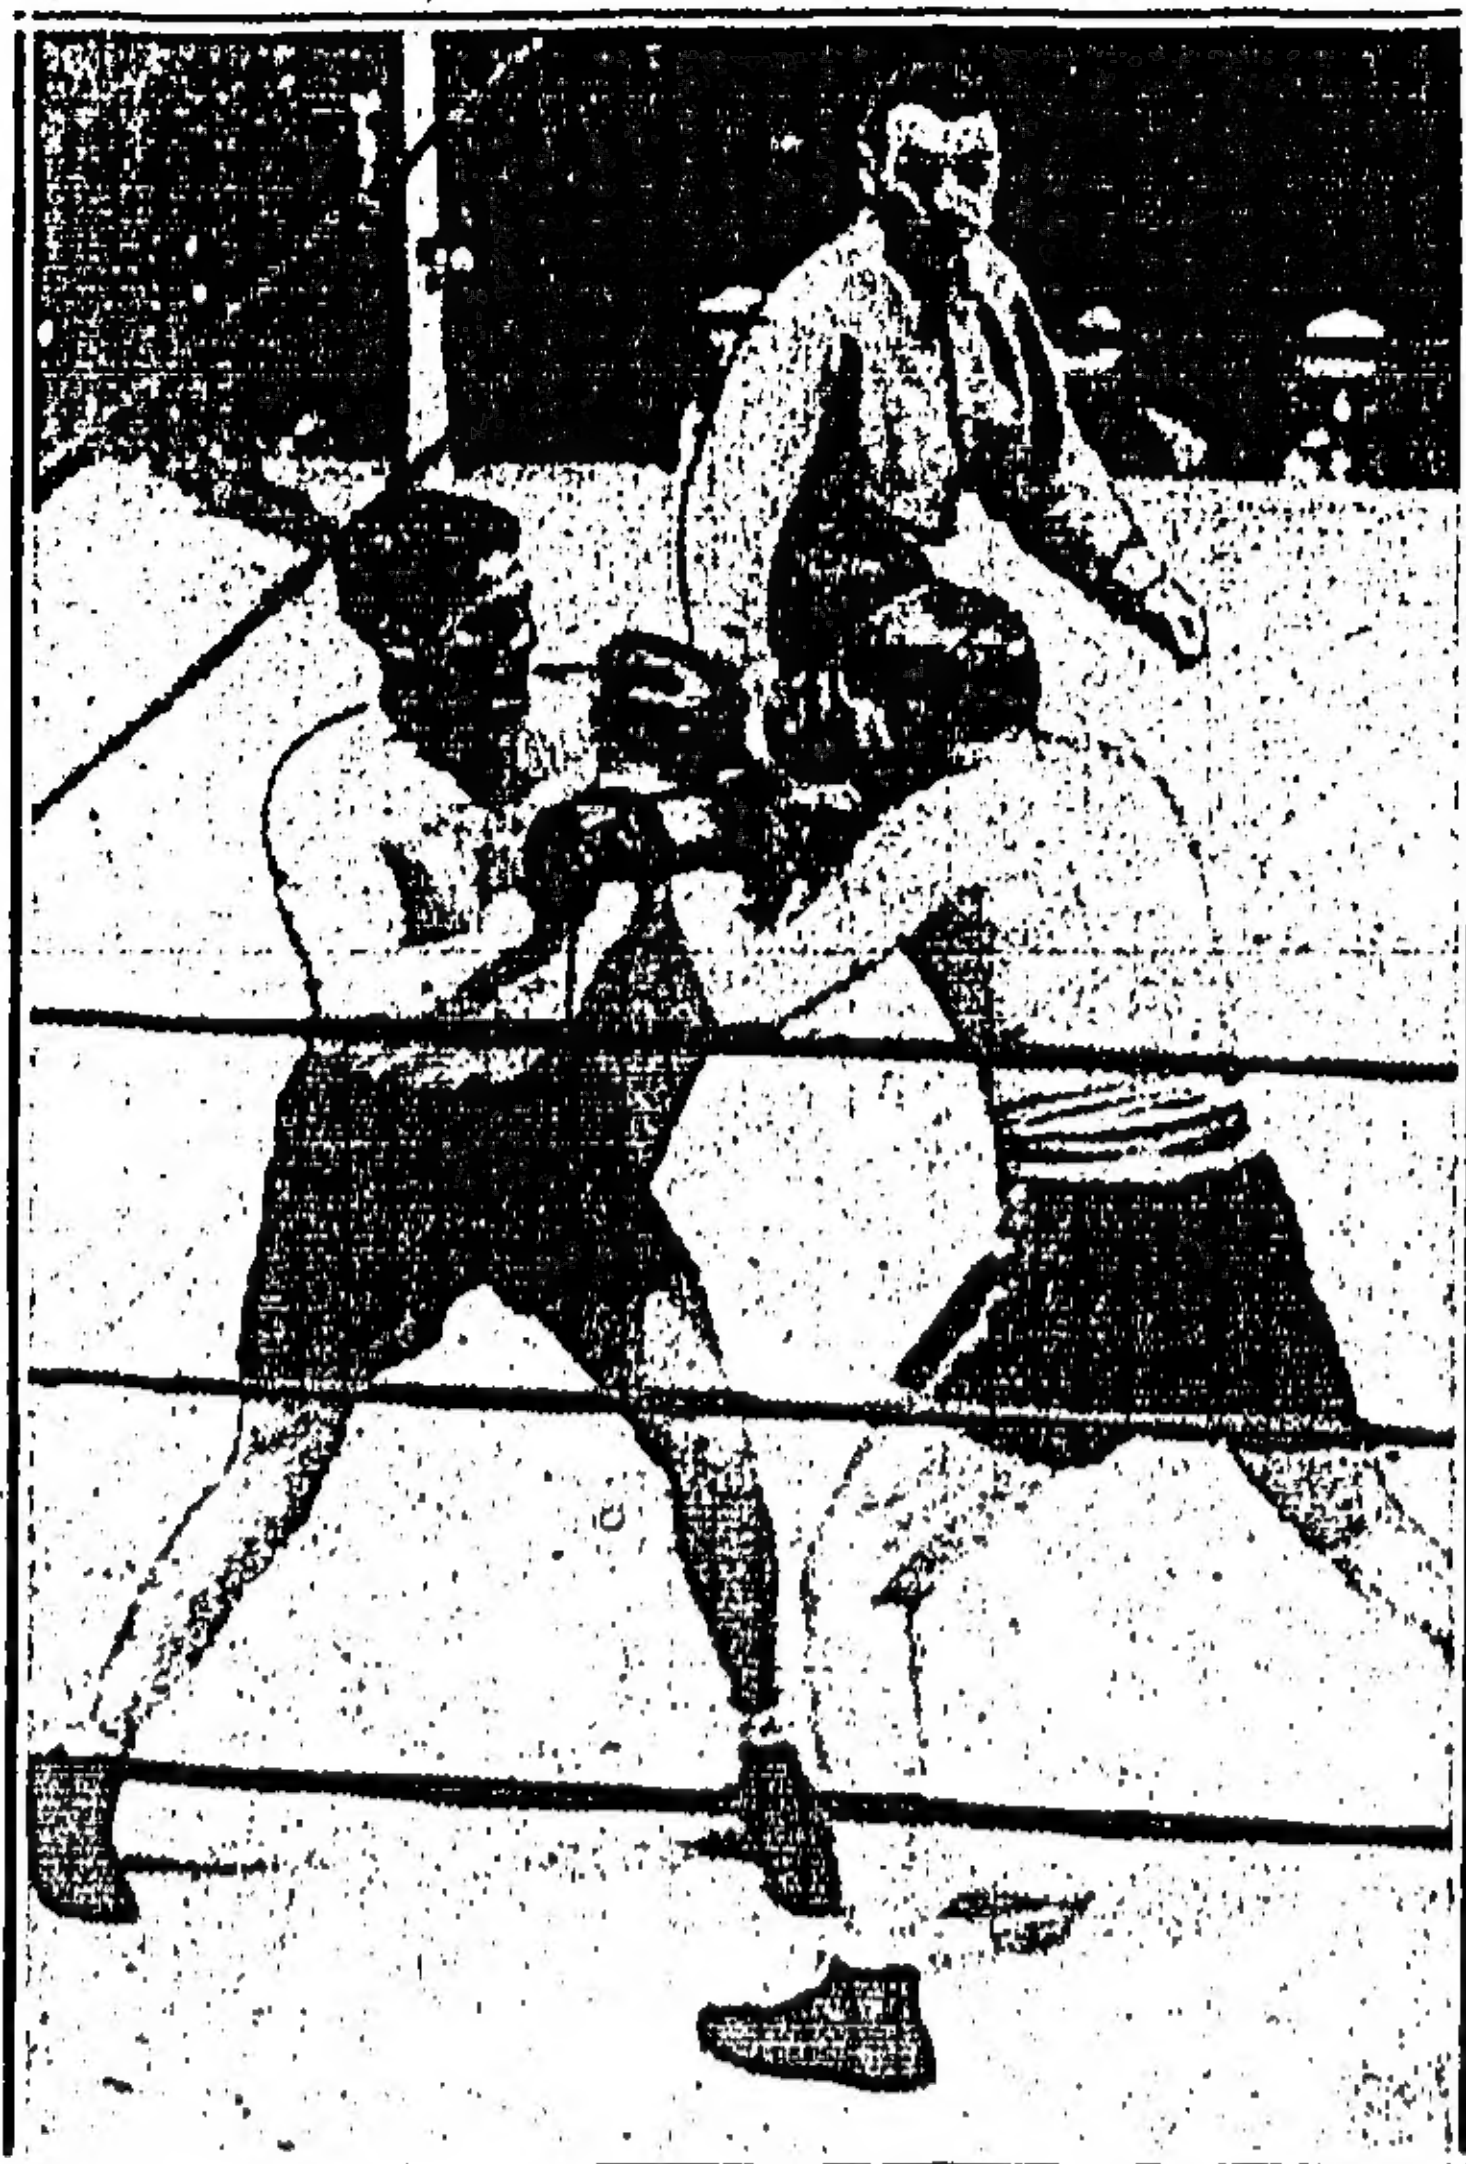

E. G. Post (Police R. C.) qualified against Neil Drummond (Tai Koo R. C.) on the Craigengower C. C. green, winning by 21 shots to 15. Two Craigengower players in J. Cavanagh and M. J. Medina were opposed on the Civil Service green where the former won by 21-10.

At the Yacht Club T. Armstrong of the Civil Service C. C. won against W. H. B. Musket of the Hongkong Electric R. C.

A surprise was created at the Club de Recreo green when H. Gittins defeated R. P. Phillips by 21 shots to 13 on the 20th head.

On the K.B.G.C. green, R. A. C. Burt defeated W. Muir by 21 shots to 18. The game was concluded on the 23rd head.

In the first session of the final of the Consolation Prize round of the Contract Bridge tournament, F. Abesner and Cheung U. Pui lead M. H. Lo and Horace Lo by 2,070 points.

Dazzling Doubles Form
By Mrs. GodfreeENGLISH GIRLS IMPRESS WITH EXCELLENT DISPLAYS

The Wightman Cup trials were held last month, and critics generally agree that they were highly successful, revealing that on form, England has good chances of winning back the trophy from American at Wimbledon this year.

Mr. H. S. Scrivenor and Mr. Frank Poxon, two well-known London critics offer interesting opinions, which are set out below.

A wise man once wrote: "Of all things there cometh satiety," and although women's doubles were not, as far as I am aware, invented in his time that does not prevent his dictum, when applied to them, from being apposite, writes H. S. Scrivenor in the Morning Post.

The ladies who took part in the third day's programme of the Wightman Cup practice games at Wimbledon on Saturday were, to start with, as keen as the proverbial condiment; but, having regard to what they had already gone through on Thursday and Friday and the existing attitude of the thermometer, it was hardly to be wondered at that, although only four matches had been set for decision, Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, Mrs. Godfree and Miss Dearman and Mrs. Pittman (who played first of all with Miss James and again with Miss Scrivenor), were all a good deal the worse for wear before the last ball had been struck. But the majority of the spectators, of whom there was quite a good muster, rewarded these devoted women by staying on to watch their efforts to the bitter end.

The patent fact, already obvious by Friday and emphasised on Saturday, was that Mrs. Godfree is the best women's doubles player we have. She knows so much about the game that I don't think it matters very much with whom she plays. On Friday she and Miss Scrivenor were narrowly beaten (after having led two match points) by Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, who were pretty obviously selectors' No. 1 pair. On Saturday she and Miss Dearman won both their matches. They first beat Mrs. Pittman and Miss James, which, though likely to happen, was not by any means a thing that was bound to happen, and then they beat Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, which was undoubtedly "some feat," although the losers had just previously lost a desperate tussle with Mrs. Whittingstall and Miss Lyle, and were a bit jaded in consequence—as well they might be.

After this match Mrs. Whittingstall threw an S. O. S. She placed against Miss Stammers and Miss Yorke, who were both fresh, was filled by Mrs. Pittman—very weary but still game as she always is—as Miss Scrivenor's partner.

A LUDICROUS FAILING.

One of the great faults of English lawn tennis nowadays is that our people won't have a bang for the match when the chance presents itself, but prefer to play as though they were trying to stave off defeat, and their inability to clinch sitting match points is becoming positively ludicrous.

Now for a few statistics. Mrs. Whittingstall and Miss Lyle, who made a sympathetic pair—though I doubt very much whether Miss Lyle ought really to be "divorced" from Miss Dearman—covered themselves with glory while defeating Miss Round and Miss Nuthall by 7-5, 4-6, 6-4. They nearly made a muddle of the first set, which they might have lost after leading by 5-2. Losing the second, in which they made a belated effort to pull up from 2-5 down, they went ahead at 3-1 in the third and held their lead for 6-4.

Mrs. Godfree and Miss Dearman only lost seven points in the course of the first set of their match with Mrs. Pittman and Miss James. As so often happens after an easily won first set, the weaker pair got a look in in the second and made the most of it. But after that the stronger two asserted their superiority to the extent of 6-2. The winners, to my mind, were even more convincing in their match with Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, whom they beat by 6-2, 7-5 after leading by 5-2 in the second set. This was a fine win. Mrs. Godfree, though tiring rapidly, showed great determination, and her partner, volleying and smashing nearly as well, backed her up ably.

Miss Stammers and Miss Yorke, both full of life, played dashing tennis against Mrs. Pittman and Miss Scrivenor while beating them by 6-4, 6-3. The losers led at one time in the second set by 3-1. As the one tired member of an otherwise lively party of four, Mrs. Pittman did quite well enough to earn praise as well as sympathy, but the result was, of course, not conclusive of very much.

It was also somewhat baffling that Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, who had played together each day and had won two matches on Thursday and one (rather luckily) on Friday, should have lost both their matches on Saturday; but as I have already suggested, I fancy satiety had something to do with it.

The features of the play were the two victories gained by Mrs. Godfree and Miss Dearman, and the double defeat of Miss Nuthall and Miss Round, writes Frank Poxon in the News-Chronicle.

Mrs. Godfree, who had played so finely on the previous day, was again in splendid form; her court-craft being admirable. It seems practically certain that she will be picked for the doubles in the Wightman Cup.

I do not know who was chiefly responsible for asking her to play in these trials, but it was certainly an inspiration which is likely to have very beneficial results.

FINE INTERCEPTIONS.

The player whom I would place next to Mrs. Godfree, on the form shown in these trials, is Mrs. Whittingstall. She and Miss Lyle played brilliantly on Saturday while beating Miss Nuthall and Miss Round by two sets to one.

Mrs. Whittingstall's work at the net was up to the standard of a good man doubles player. Her interceptions were made with lightning speed, and she always "put the ball away." Miss Lyle played her usual role of being absolutely safe.

Both Miss Lyle and Miss Dearman have strong claims to be ranked as two of the best doubles players in the country. They do not scintillate, but they are extremely sound.

Miss Stammers and Miss Yorke played much better than on the previous two days while beating Mrs. Pittman and Miss Scrivenor in straight sets; but Miss Stammers is far more likely to play in the Wightman Cup singles than in the doubles.

Intense
Interest
In TestsWORLD WIDE DEMAND
FOR TICKETS

London.
Interest in the Australian cricketers is not confined to this country and their own. From all over the world letters are being received, requesting tickets for the Test matches.

The match at the Oval will not be played until mid-August, yet already enough foreign money has come in to start a bureau de change on a small scale.

Mr. A. P. Davis, the Surrey secretary, says that quite a number of Australians are making the trip and have taken the precaution of booking in advance.

Lord's Cricket Ground has had several requests for blocks of tickets from Holland, where there are one or two teams which have played against touring sides from this country.

For the five Tests thousands of tickets have already been sold and many hundreds of pounds are changing hands for reserved seats, which are being rapidly exhausted.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

There is a certain thrill in making all your trump separately. Of course, a hand must be timed properly to allow this. You must make sure that you are going to retain control of the hand.

To-day's hand is not difficult to play, but the declarer makes ten trump tricks and two aces. If he had led even one round of trump,

♠ 9 6 3	♥ A K 8 5 3	♦ 9 8 4	♣ A K 8 7 4
♠ Q J 5 2	♥ W	♦ A 8 3	♣ 10 9 8 4 2
♠ 7 4	♥ S	♦ 10 9 8 4 2	♣ None
♠ None	♥ Dealer	♦ None	♣ None
♠ A 10 7 5	♥ 10 3	♦ K J 10 5	♣ J 7
	♥ K Q J 6 3	♦ Duplicate—All vul.	♣ Opening lead—♠ K.
South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	1 ♠
2 ♣	2 ♣	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	4 ♣
Pass	6 ♣	Pass	Pass

his contract would have been defeated. I thought the bidding on the hand rather interesting when the hand was played.

The Bidding

East has a close decision to make between doubling the one diamond or bidding a spade. Personally, I would prefer the double. With that hand you are certainly willing to play it at two spades.

When South bid two clubs, West's bid of two diamonds was a cue bid showing support for spades. On the next round, when West forced in clubs, he was making a direct slam try.

East showed control of the heart suit with a bid of four hearts. While I don't believe in misuse of ace-showing bids, there are times when an ace-showing bid of this kind is valuable. That was all the information that West needed to jump to six spades.

The Play

South's opening lead was the king of clubs, declarer won with the ace in dummy and discarded a losing heart. The hand will cross-ruff right out for ten tricks. All the declarer needs to lose is a heart.

If a spade had been opened, of course the declarer would then have to lead up to the queen of hearts to develop a trick to make his contract. He would then use eight of his trump for cross-ruffing.

Today's Contract Problem

South plays the contract at six no trump. West opens the deuce of spades. South wins and starts the heart suit. Should East win the first or second heart trick? And if not, why?

♠ 9 5 3	♥ A Q 8 5 2	♦ A 10 5 4	♣ 10

MARK SLUMPS

GERMAN DEFLATION RUMOUR HEARD

London, June 5. Apprehension regarding the German currency position and fears of the possibility of the Reichsmark being devaluated, resulted in a sharp slump in the mark to below the six cent gold parity level to-day.

Devaluation is considered unlikely, however, with Dr. Schacht at the helm of the Reichsbank. He is the man responsible for stabilisation. On the other hand, there is an opinion that the present depreciation is not unwelcome to the German Government, as it further stresses the difficulties of transfer of debt funds even on the present diminished scale.

The fall of sterling in terms of international currency is generally attributed to "gross undervaluation of the dollar," and the link between the dollar and Continental gold currencies has resulted in the strength of the latter vis-a-vis sterling.

The action of the British Control Fund intervening has caused the weakness of the franc in terms of the dollar, and hence a resumption of gold shipments from Paris to New York.

Dear covering of dollars on the Continent has added a further momentum to the movement.

Paris financiers, according to the Financial Times, believe that without British intervention the pound would have fallen considerably lower.—Reuter.

KING'S BIRTHDAY

OBSERVANCES ON SHAMEN

Canton, June 4. A children's party was given by the British community of Canton for the children on Saturday last, in celebration of the birthday of His Majesty King George V. Owing to the doubtful state of the weather, tea was served in the hall of H.B.M. Consulate-General, but as the rain kept off except for one small shower, races were afterwards held on the lawn of the Consulate General. These were divided into sections for children under six, and children over six. Prizes were given to the successful kiddies, and small gifts were hidden in various parts of the garden, and these the kiddies hunted for amidst great excitement. When all were found the little guests, of whom there were some 40 present, marched in file past H.B.M. Consul-General, Mr. Herbert Phillips, C.M.G., O.B.E., who presented each one with the Union Jack. Following this presentation, three hearty cheers were given for the King, after which the party adjourned to the Consulate General to partake of ice-cream before proceeding home. A novel feature, and one that appealed very greatly to the kiddies was the introduction of a conjuring display, which held them spellbound.

PARADE HELD.

This morning, a parade of troops was held on the football field, comprising detachments of the British runboats in port, supplemented by the Shamene Municipal Police, the salute being taken by H.B.M. Consul-General. It was lucky that the rain held off until just as the parade was brought to an end.

From 11.30 till 12.30, H.B.M. Consul General was "At Home" to officials of the local Provincial and

BURIED ALIVE

THREE KILLED AT SHAMUKWAN

Three persons are known to have been buried alive and no hope is held out for them; and another was rescued from the same terrible death last night when a hillside crumbled above the fragile dwellings of a number of village people at Salwanho and engulfed the houses.

One body had already been recovered, according to police reports at 2 a.m. this morning, and a man had been dug out by rescuers and resuscitated. Two were known to be under the slide and no hope was held out for them.

The place where the landslide occurred is in the vicinity of the Cheung Lok theatre.

A call was sent through to Central Fire Station at 10.22 p.m. and the appliances responded immediately, in charge of Station Officer Cash.

Rescue work commenced within about fifteen minutes of the time the report was received at the Fire Station and the one known survivor was shortly afterwards brought out from beneath the debris of demolished houses and the gravel slide.

Commencing on Saturday next, weekly tableaux will be held in the Garrison Lecture Hall, commencing at 7.30 p.m.

Municipal Governments, members of the Consular Body, representatives of H.B.M. Navy, and the other Navies, and the community of Canton. In a short speech, Mr. Phillips welcomed all his guests and at the appropriate moment the health of His Majesty was drunk. This evening the British members of the Canton Club have invited their friends to a reception in the Club.—Our Own Correspondent.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

FOR THE TENNIS GIRL

Shorts Now In Vogue

If you are young and slim, you will not be concerned with the great shorts controversy. For shorts, in one fullness or another, are certain to be much in evidence on most suburban courts in England this summer.

Admittedly, those little-boy flannel shorts are not for everyone. But the wide, cunningly-pleated kind, indistinguishable from a short skirt unless the wearer happens to be in Lennox action, these are a boon to the tennis girl. And this is a model that goes in grace, crowned by Royal approval.

All materials are used for these wide shorts: thin woollen, linen, pique, silk, or crepe de chine. The blouses sometimes have a collar and a tiny sleeve to make up a business-like ensemble, though square necks and no sleeves are equally popular.

A clever notion is to embody the shorts in a one-piece dress. This relieves us of the worry, long known to the tennis playing male of the species, of how to keep a tidy waist-line. For what we scheming women want is any advantage to be gained from trousers, no accompanying disadvantages, and the retention of our feminine charm into the bargain.

A good idea is the button-on skirt which goes on over the shorts when the set is over—an ingenious way of knowing the long and the short of it at the same time. Now, having read thus far, do not promptly send in your resignation because no amount of ingenuity will ever persuade you to shorts. Tennis frocks are still very much with us, never fear.

Most of them are belted at the normal waistline this year. Many of them are cut low at the back. But arrangements are usually made for buttoning up if you have tanned not wisely but too well, or if a glacial summer zephyr howls along the spine. Often a removable collar-cum-fichu is a stand-by for any occasion, when your lower vertebrae are not feeling up to the ordeal of a public appearance.

Yokes are very modish, and necks are most often square or V-shaped. Skirt fullness is generally achieved by inverted pleats, though gored skirts are seen. Inverted pleats back and front or insets of knife pleating are fashionable.

Many frocks button all the way down, and will spread out flat, to the marked satisfaction of the home laundress. Rough-surfaced linens and cottons are popular, and white pique, like Charley's Aunt, is still running. A new material of fine cellular cotton is uncrushable, very amenable to the wash-tub, and altogether a useful contribution to tennis chic.

The coolie-coat is quite at home in a courtyard deck chair, and provides a pleasant change from the orthodox revers, pockets, and a belt style. It can be of off-white tweed, camel hair, or woollen jersey, or you can have a pastel colour, which will be useful with other frocks. And the claims of a linen swagger coat should receive your careful consideration, since it will wash as easily as the frocks it is destined to cover.

Ideal for Mornings—

A frock you can put on in a jiffy—
It is shadow-proof and shows out the blundering.
Make it of cool
cotton or linen—
You will always enjoy wearing this model—
Easy to Make—

Here is a delightful house dress you'll find easy to model in checked gingham. The designs may be had in six sizes: 14, 16, 18 and 20 (with corresponding bust measures of 32, 34, 36 and 38), and also in 40 and 42. Size 18 requires 4 yards of 35 inch material, plus 5 1-2 yards of 1 1-2 inch bias binding.

YOUR CHILDREN. Child Needs Elbow Room At Home

By Olive Roberts Barton

Teddy broke a lamp. It had to be the best one, of course. The week before he'd broken a vase upstairs, but his mother just said, "Oh, that old thing! I'm glad it's gone."

This was different. Teddy was ten shades of a criminal. He heard it for three days, also every one who came to the house heard it, and every one over the telephone heard it.

He caught it from his father, his grandma, his cousins and his aunt. He caught it from the maid. That lovely lamp that had no counterpart in America because it was old Majolica and could never be replaced!

Patience Exhausted

He didn't mind the bread and water, the rest cure of the first scolding. But when the matter became a chestnut his suffering soul bared its fangs.

The lady with lace came to the house and as Teddy banged in from school he heard his mother say, "You, I almost feel that the house doesn't mean anything any more. It belonged to my great-grandmother, you know, and I had it electrified—made into a lamp. And the shade was—"

Teddy marched upstairs. In a minute he marched down again and slammed a jingling iron bank on a chair. "There," he declared grimly. "Take that and buy yourself a new lamp. And never let me hear you mention that old G—d—lamp again."

I heard this story and in the main it is true. The lamp may have been Sevres instead of Majolica and the lady may have been selling corsets. But one detail I got straight and that was Teddy's action and Teddy's speech.

If I saw that kid I would buy him a soda, take him to the circus and one dark night give him a football and sneak him into some of the houses I know. Houses freighted with finery that threaten everyone's peace of mind and the children's sanity.

True, children should learn to respect property, but usually they will take a chance. One more bang of a ball on a wall; one too on a fine chair to reach the arrow caught in a curtain. Whoever thought there would be a nail in the sole and that satin-dress would slit so easily?

True, too, that when they are reprimanded for carelessness, they should learn to take it like sports and mend their ways if not their breakage. But give me the fellow who knows when things have gone too far and stands up for his own self-respect.

The epilogue is that his mother was so astonished she laughed. She told the joke on herself. She said it was a lesson to her and it's a fine mother who acknowledges when she's been put in her place.

All museum pieces, like the goose, should hang high.

Married Flirts

by MABEL
McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA HOTAILING and DEREK BLISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy intends to go on with her job, teaching in a settlement.

After returning from a honeymoon in Europe Lila asks the Weavers to dinner. Among the guests is wealthy MARKU BROUGHTON, who once asked Gypsy to marry him. He showers Gypsy with attentions and Tom is jealous.

Lila's husband offers her a job on Saturdays, cataloguing his library and Gypsy accepts without telling Tom. Just as she finishes the work she is taken ill and the doctor tells her she is going to have a baby. Tom insists she must give up her job at the settlement. Gypsy is happy keeping house until Lila comes back from a winter in Florida and asks her to lunch. Gypsy, realising her clothes are shabby in comparison with Lila's.

CHAPTER XVIII

The big car slid up and Lila got out. She was in suave black from head to foot, with accents of white. White gloves, white flowers on her tilted black pageboys pill-box, frill of white organdie emerging from her jacket. Gypsy, waiting in one corner of the lobby saw her come in. Even in that well-dressed throng of noontime butterflies, Lila stood out. Heads were turned as she went through, consciously unconscious of scrutiny.

Gypsy thought, humorously, "Surely I'm the only woman in the restaurant who's washed her own breakfast dishes." All of these lunchers were so sleek and assured, they made her feel shabby and small.

Lila was all gracious interest. After a brief and gay recital of her own winter fitting, she had turned the conversation to the Weavers' affairs. What were their plans for the summer? She and Derek were taking a little place at Southampton, just a cottage really—only seven rooms—but it was right on the shore. They'd go down the first of June.

"We have a lounge on the apartment," Gypsy said sturdily. "We will be there all summer."

"Not in July, my dear," murmured Lila, scandalized. "You'll perish! You must come down to us for a week or two."

She meant to be kind, Gypsy thought, but I wish her tone weren't so patronizing. Aloud she said something light about millions of people remaining in the city all summer and finding it fairly comfortable, too.

Lila seemed more restless than ever, thinner, more feverish. She toyed with her food and smoked cigarette after cigarette. She was forever waving to someone at a distant table, smiling brilliantly at a passerby.

All in all, it was scarcely a satisfactory meal. The food was exquisitely cooked and served, tempting Gypsy's appetite. Napery, silver and china were of the finest. An orchestra played, unseen, and the clack of gay tongues lent an air of festivity. Spring hats, silver foxes, costumes fresh from their Paris boxes, pleased the eye. And still Gypsy was not happy. She had been feeling these tranquil weeks, that she was a very lucky person. Why, she had everything; a husband who adored her and who was good-looking, intelligent and ambitious; a comfortable little apartment; good friends; a loving family . . . and, crown of all, the promise of a child. Now she experienced the feeling that the scales had moved. Lila's side was in the ascendancy. Could it be that she was jealous of Lila? But that was absurd.

She frowned it down. But the thought persisted. Lila's entire background, her smooth, beautifully ordered existence threw into sharp relief Gypsy's own struggle with stewpans and laundry hamper and bathroom shelves.

"Seen Marko?" Lila asked idly, sipping her tea.

Gypsy felt herself flushing, the colour flowed into her face. She could see herself in a mirror just beyond: a girl with a plain blue hat covering her brown curls.

"Not lately," she said evenly. "I finished some library work I was doing for him, but not since then. That's several months ago."

"He was asking for you," Lila contributed. "Only last night. He said you hadn't been well. He was so sweet. You know how Marko is." She looked at Gypsy curiously, as though expecting confidences. But Gypsy only agreed tepidly. But somehow you felt, always, there was some motive other than simple friendliness behind all of this. Perhaps merely because the man liked to be considered a sort of god, kinder and better than his fellows.

"We saw a lot of him in Palm Beach," Lila said languidly. "He had that woman there. But none of us paid any attention to her."

"What woman?" Gypsy was stung into attention.

"That creature who worked in his office several years ago," said Lila, smiling faintly as if at some amusing memory. "She's dreadful, really, but one accepts her—because of Marko."

"You mean she—they—"

Gypsy stammered, unable to frame the ugly words.

"Well, you can call her a common law wife, if you like," said Lila with a disingenuous laugh. "He's been taking her places for four or five years. I suppose that gives her a sort of standing. What Marko can see in her nobody knows. But it's just a phase . . . it will pass."

Gypsy was sickened. Marko

could do anything—could, in the coarse phrase of the hour, "get away with anything" because he was rich and powerful. Eyes would be turned a glance on less successful men, but Marko could do no wrong.

The room suddenly seemed changed. The chattering women had a sinister air. Everything wore an overtone of ugliness. What a world, thought Gypsy! What a topsy-turvy world for a child to be born into! These days, almost anything could send her in to a passion of tears and Lila's words had touched a hidden spring of fears in her inmost being. She longed with all her soul to be safe at home in the little haven she and Tom had made.

"Don't you feel well?" She stammered something. She couldn't be ill here—the room swayed and whirled around her and there was a black pit yawning to receive her. The waiter sprang to attention, pouring her a glass of water.

"I'm so sorry." The mists had cleared away and she was seeing everything in its true light again. "It's stupid of me. I felt giddy for a minute."

"Quite all right." But there had been, for the instant, a flash of something like pity and contempt in Lila's glance. "If you would be so stupid as to be having a baby!" that glance had said, plainer than plain!

On the surface everything was quite as it had been before. Gypsy made her farewells. It had been so sweet of Lila to ask her, and she had enjoyed it.

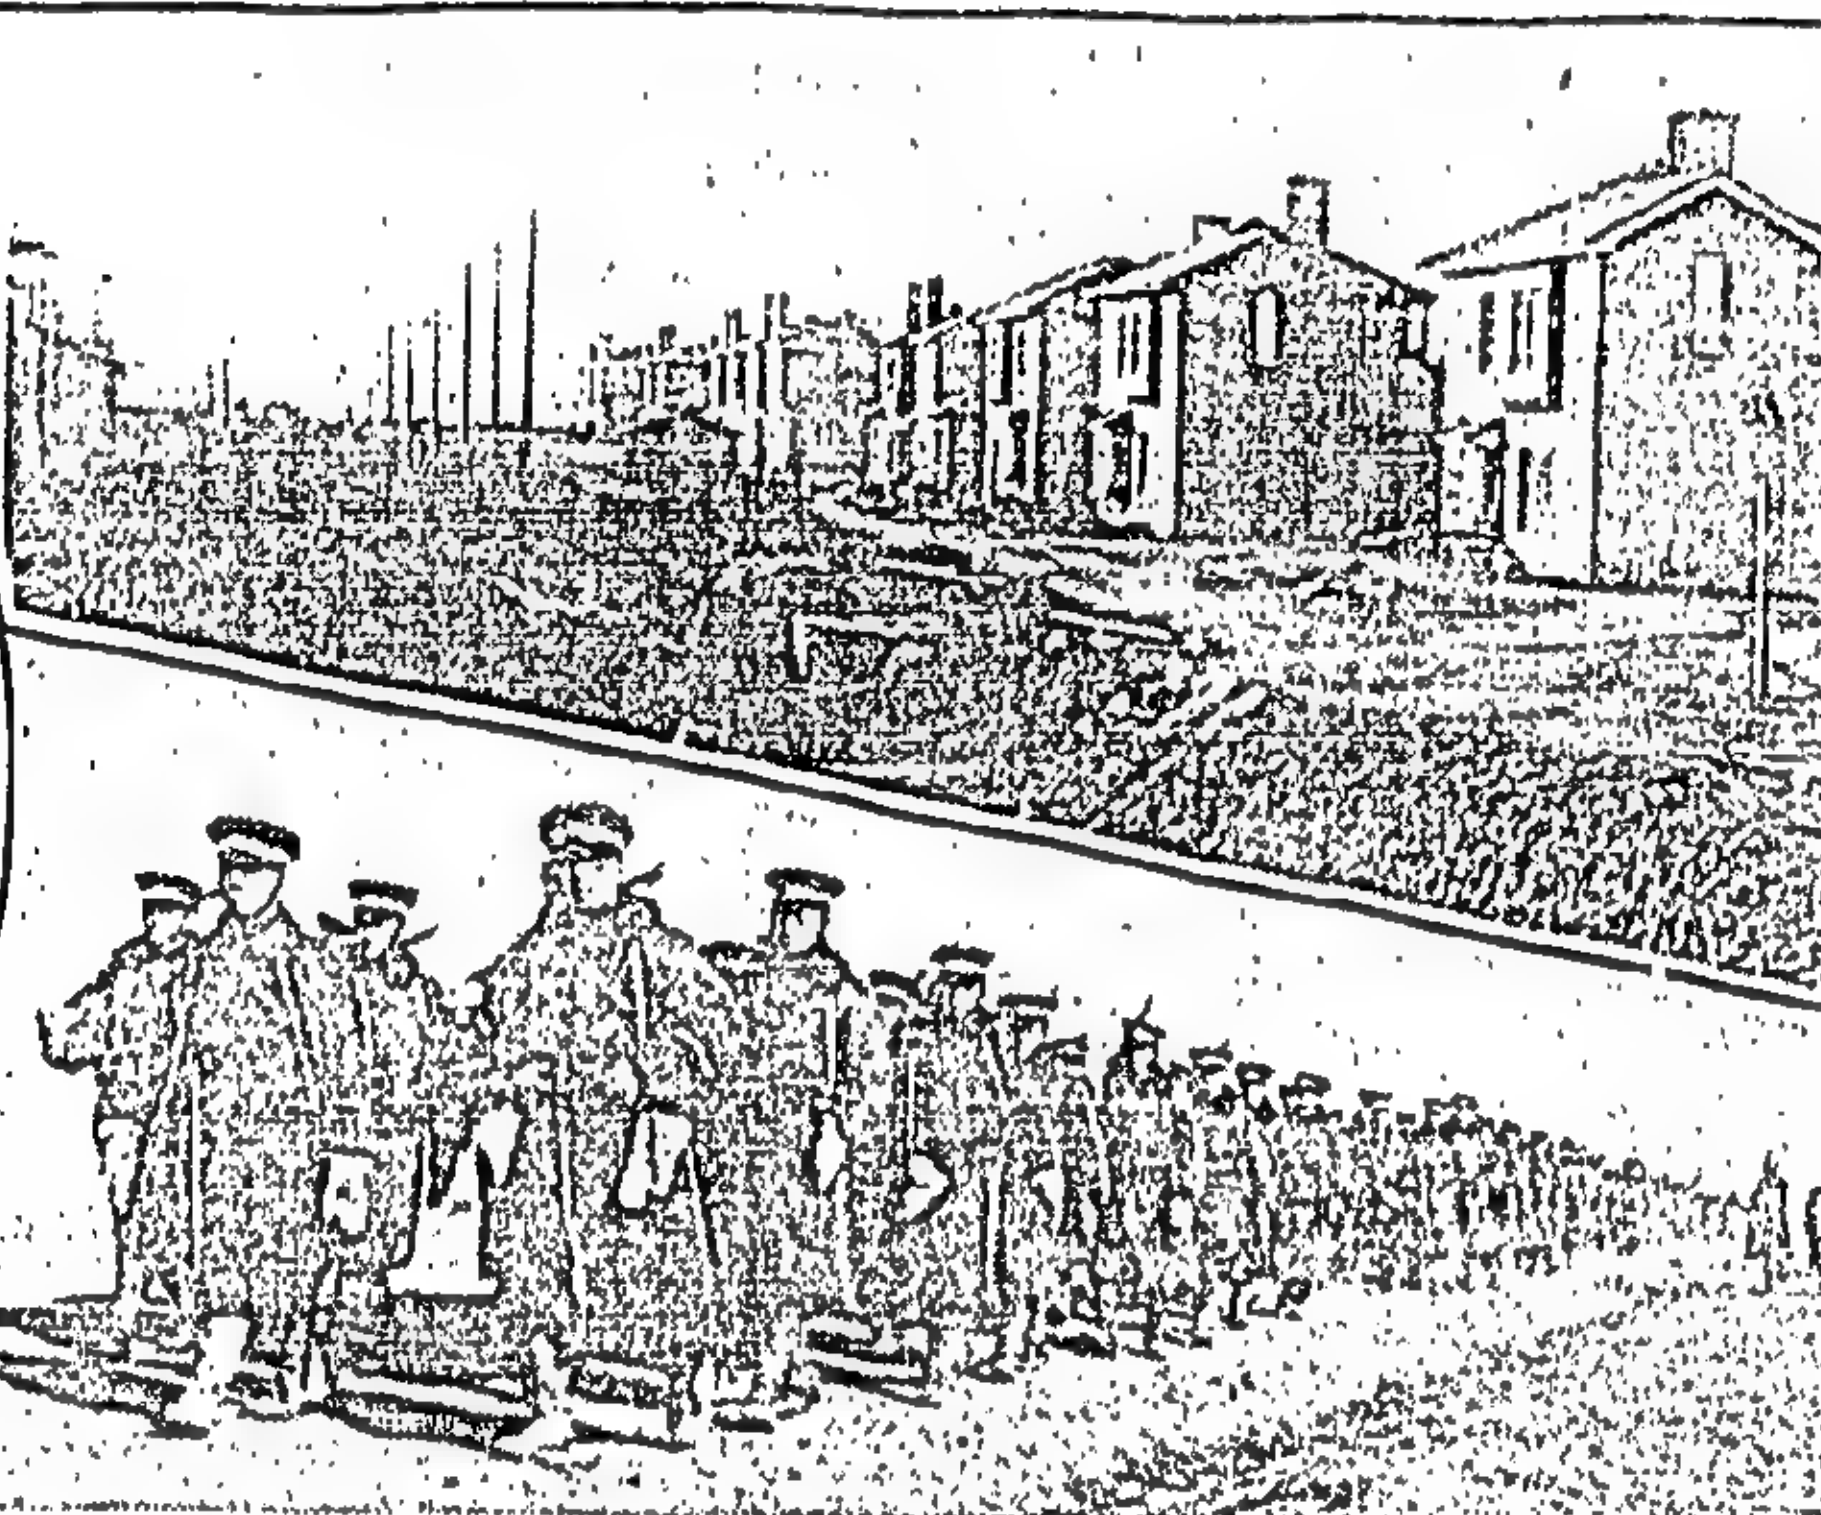

"Not at all, my dear. Always nice to see you."

And then they had parted, Lila turning toward the avenue and Gypsy walking, rather slowly, eastward. Everything was the same. (Continued on Page 7.)

IN MANCHURIA TO-DAY: EXCLUSIVE PICTURES

Manchuria's new athletic enthusiasm includes baseball, brought to Manchukuo by the Japanese. The skinned gentleman is "throwing in the first ball."

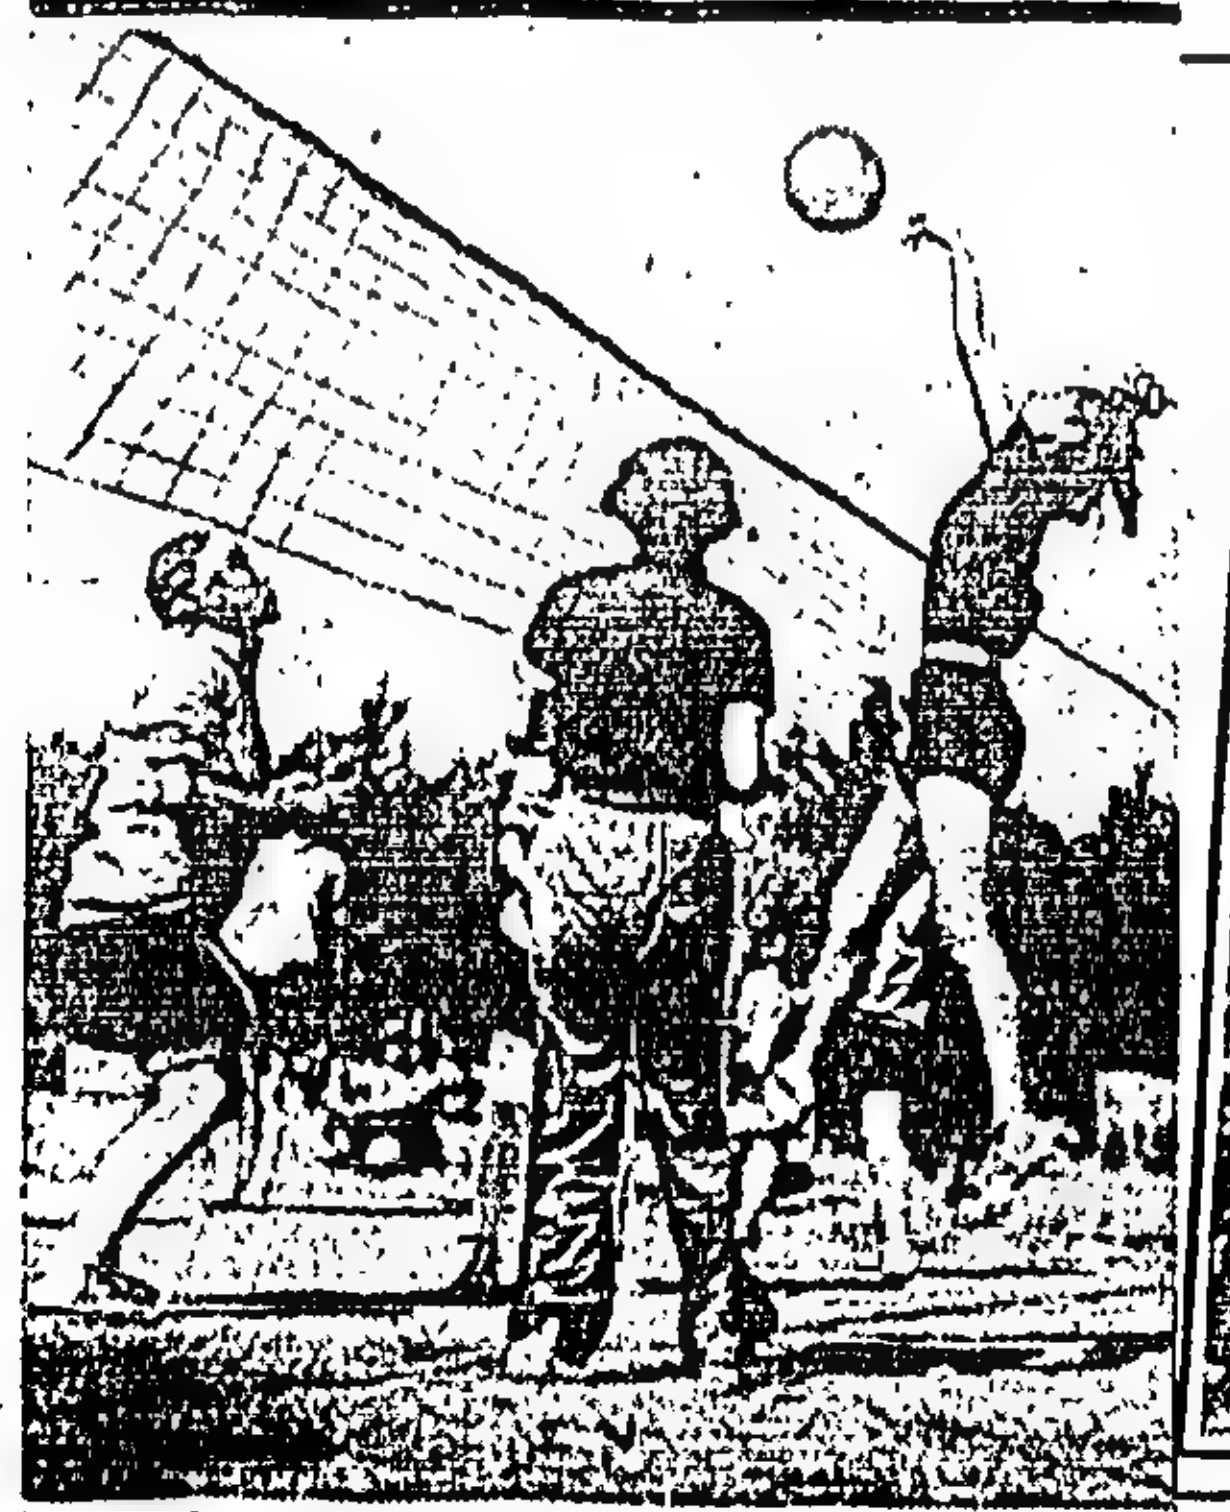

Rows of model dwellings, top, rise along the streets of Hsinking . . . all built on the western model, and suggesting nothing of the ancient ways of the Manchus while the national police or gendarmes, shown above on the march, are strikingly like Japanese troops, carrying rifles, and handy mittens to protect them against the severe weather.

The ancient as well as the new is to be seen in the streets of Hsinking. Here a street "prophet" or fortuneteller reads a client's palm.

In Manchukuo, as in most other countries these days, the government goes after the children . . . here is an earnest-faced group of young Manchus properly sponsored by their elders behind them, giving a couple of lusty "huzzas" for the new emperor, and waving placards with enthusiastic slogans for the new Manchu state. Many organizations for the training of youth are being instituted, even for the very young.

Sports of every kind are encouraged . . . Here you see daughters of the ancient Manchus indulging in the very modern sport of volleyball . . .

A vivid contrast between the old and the new in Hsinking. The coachman is driving an ancient vehicle somewhat like a Russian droschky, pulled by a sleepy horse . . . while in the background may be seen a modern car.

This poster, displayed at the enthronement of Pu Yi, represents the ambition of the new state to rise on a firm foundation.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"I've got another string to my bow now," laughs Spencer Tracy, star of "Looking for Trouble," the current 20th Century picture which is the feature film at the Queen's Theatre. "Any time I'm a flop as an actor, I can get a job as a telephone linesman—and I'm not kidding!" In the interests of accuracy, a hobby which is shared by both Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck, Tracy and Jack Oakie, who are co-starred in this romantic action thriller of telephone company life, were given a regular course of instruction in the art of the repair men of the telephone company before they began work on this picture. Tracy and Oakie, as well as their two screen sweethearts, Constance Cummings and Arline Judge, were first instructed in switchboard operation. Then the boys were taken out to some wooden poles in Hollywood and shown how to climb the poles with a telephone linesman's pike. A more dangerous lesson consisted in putting high up on the wires between telephone poles, and instructing them in twisting rings on messenger stands. Operating a tractor used for hauling cable reels proved easier than handling the reels themselves, but splicing underground cable rather stumped the boys. A spectacular stunt which they enjoyed, however, was that of raising telephone poles with derricks. They also had plenty of fun with the post-hole digger and earth-boring machine provided by the telephone company. In addition to the underground and overhead splicing of cables, Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie were initiated into the laying of tape-armoured cable in trenches, were shown the latest developments in television, teletype-writing, telephotography, ship-to-shore telephone service and the handling of nation-wide hookups by the telephone company. "Looking for Trouble" is a United Artists release.

"Midnight Club"

Clive Brook and George Raft, are co-featured in "Midnight Club," the E. Phillips Oppenheim story, which Alexander Hall directed with George Somner, and which opens on Thursday at the King's Theatre. Says Hall: "Both Brook and Raft command exceptionally large followings throughout the world. Despite the fact that to them I am a comparatively new director, they showed the utmost respect for me and my ideas. No petty jealousy existed. They worked together perfectly, and the picture I think, shows it." Brook and Raft are supported in "Midnight Club" by Allison Skipworth and Helen Vinson. It's the story of an American detective's jaunt to London to break up a great jewel-theft and smuggling ring, which has baffled Scotland Yard. Raft

"The Show-Off"

A new romantic team makes its bow to local motion picture fans from the screen of the Alhambra Theatre tomorrow when Spencer Tracy and Madge Evans appear as husband and wife in "The Show-Off," adaptation of the famous stage play. Each of these players has sky-rocketed to fame during the past two years. Tracy has become one of the most popular male players, and Miss Evans has been voted the most popular leading lady of the screen. Their teaming for the first time creates a new romantic pair whose debut will be anticipated with interest. Choice of a vehicle for their initial appearance together brings to the screen one of the most famous stage plays of current theatrical history. From the moment of its first presentation on the New York stage, "The Show-Off" was a smash hit. It broke all attendance and long-run records in New York and became a hit on the stages of theatres in virtually every city in the United States and England. It is said to have netted a fortune to its playwright, George Kelly. The sparkling humour which made it a success on the stage has been amplified in the screen version. Tracy appears as the classic character, J. Aubrey Piper, the consummate egotist. He is the fellow who knows everything about everything, and isn't bashful about telling the world how good he is. Of all his wife's relations, he loves himself the best. Miss Evans plays the wife who tries to save him from ruin, and almost fails. The story, while built for comedy, contains moments of heart-stirring pathos. Others in the notable cast are Henry Wadsworth, Loh Wilson, Grant Mitchell, Clara Blandick, Alan Edwards and Claude Gillingwater. Charles F. Riesner directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Bottoms Up"

"Bottoms Up," at the King's Theatre, is reported to be rich in comedy, romance and the glamour of Hollywood. Against this background, Buddy DeSylva has filmed a romantic story. "Pat" Paterson, charming importation from the English stage, makes her American film debut in

Other members of the impressive cast are Thelma Todd, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Dell Henderson, Suzanne Kaaren and Douglas Wood.

"Moulin Rouge"

Like wise apothecaries compounding a prescription with scrupulous care, Joseph Schenck and Darryl Zanuck assembled the ingredients of "Moulin Rouge," Constance Bennett's first starring vehicle for 20th Century Productions, a United Artists release now being shown at the Alhambra and World Theatres. For this musical de luxe they ordered the following:—A liberal measure of Constance Bennett in a dual role filled with intensely dramatic moments, and as a singer of songs destined to be sung by everyone. Franchot Tone, hailed as the screen's most romantic lover. Such songs as "Coffee in the Morning" and "Kisses at Night," "Song of Surrender" and "Boulevard of Broken Dreams." The prettiest chorines possible. Amazing cinema chemists these two. And you will be enchanted with their prescription.

BRITAIN'S WAR DEBT DECISION

Britain's decision to make no payment whatever to the United States on June 15, when the next instalment of the war debt interest falls due, is one which has been forced upon her. Had it not been for the passing of the Johnson Act, by which no distinction is drawn between formal defaulters and token payers, Britain would once again have made a payment. As matters are, she has been left with the alternatives of meeting all the interest charges due, totalling $262,000,000, or, since a token payment would not remove her from the category of an actual defaulter, of making no payment at all. The resolve to adopt the latter course makes the question of getting down to a final settlement one of urgency. The probability, indeed, is that the British decision was largely based on the hope that it would expedite negotiations with this end in view. The point to be stressed is that there is no question of Britain repudiating her obligations. That is made perfectly clear in the latest Note. In this connection, it must be remembered that ever since she made her first token payment, Britain has taken the stand that she is not disposed to revert to payment of the debt on the old basis. She is, however, willing and anxious to negotiate a revised agreement. The trouble has been that past approaches have not produced anything like unanimity of view between Britain and the United States as to the figure acceptable. Finland has been cited by America as the only war debtor to meet its obligations in full, and it has been stated that an agreement with Finland would be used as a "yardstick" in respect of other debtors. Against this, we have to put the fact that even a "Finnish model revision" would not meet the British viewpoint. Such a settlement would be based upon a virtual cancellation of interest charges. Coupled with other adjustments, this would bring the British obligation down to something like two billion dollars. Even this sum would, in Congress's present temper, be regarded as profligate generosity. Precisely what Britain would be prepared to offer has not been disclosed, but it is said that Sir Frederick Leith Ross, when he visited the States last autumn, proposed a tenth of two billion dollars, payable in a lump sum. Although President Roosevelt has shown himself more hospitable towards the debtors' case than Congress, the British offer of last autumn left him and his subordinate negotiators cold. It is clear, therefore, that a wide gap exists between the British and American

SPLITTING HAIRS

Mr. Norman Davis splits hairs at Geneva and Mr. Anthony Eden supports him. In what circumstances can tangible results emerge from such a spirit? Mutual Assistance Pacts may, as Mr. Davis asserted, be outside the mandate of the Disarmament Conference, in themselves. But Mr. Davis admits of the need for guarantees of execution within a Disarmament Treaty, and if mutual assistance pacts appear the safest guarantee of execution, resistance to mere consideration is anomalous to say the least. M. Litvinoff is really inviting acceptance of the principle that every man's hand should be against an aggressor—his scheme implies no more and no less. He may be charged with thinking chiefly of the Soviet's skin, but that in itself is no argument against the principle he defines. If his proposals offer security for the Soviet, they may offer security to all, if all come in. But the United States declines and Mr. Eden trends in Mr. Davis's footsteps. He may believe with M. Litvinoff that until the nations assume all the obligations that go with the ideal of collective responsibility for peace, permanent peace can never be established; but he also knows that there is no comfort for anyone inside such an undertaking while the United States remains determined to stay outside.

TEST TEAM

England's team for the First Test, or rather, the nomination of fourteen players for the Trent Bridge game, hardly qualifies the Selection Committee for the school of daring experimenters. The only choice that might be termed interesting is that which has fallen upon K. Farnes, Cambridge and Essex. There is hardly one other member of the likely attack who looks a possible Bradman-beater, unless it be Geary, who doubtless impressed the selectors at Leicester a few weeks ago. Larwood is out because, despite early buzzards, his foot has not yet recovered from the strange injury that incapacitated him in Australia. A suggestion made that recent influences played a part, that Larwood's absence is attributable to another "friendly gesture" to the Australians, may be dismissed, crudely, as boloney.

SOVIET IN FAR EAST

Equally absurd, too, is the report, from quite another sphere of current interest that Red troops have crossed the Manchurian border—and occupied Tungtashien. Moscow's denial was scarcely necessary. The Soviet's policy in the Far East should be well understood by this time. Moscow expects trouble and, far from hiding her fears, makes preparations to meet it when and/or if it comes. But the Soviets are doing anything but solving a clash. Their military limitations are best known to themselves. As to the importance of such provocation propaganda, this obviously depends upon the source.

U.S. BONDS IN DEFAULT

The suggestion by a reader that Mr. Neville Chamberlain might submit certain defaulted bonds to the United States Treasury in part payment of war debt obligations strikes a piquant note, although it is not thereby rendered any more helpful. Unfortunately, perhaps, these bonds are not bonds of the United States within the meaning of the funding agreement. They represent loans to certain of the States in the South, funds employed in fighting the North and the Federal idea. As they are repudiated by the borrowers, there is double reason for refusal by the Federal authorities to recognise their validity. There is, of course, no telling what would be Washington's reaction to the event of a British Chancellor making a collection and mustering the nerve to present them. They might be accepted as a tribute to bravado. And again, Washington might be only too glad to get hold of them, at any price, to put an end at last to the constant outdraggings of this skeleton in the cupboard of American international finance.

can conceptions. How to bridge it is the problem of the moment. But two things are clear in regard to the British attitude—there is no intention to repudiate the debt, nor is there to be any departure from the principle of the Balfour Note, by which Britain declared her intention of seeking no more from her debtors than she requires to meet her obligations to the United States.

BEAUTY SLEEP

By GERALD HEARD

"SLEEP that knits up the unravelled sleeve of care"—It does, but do we know how it does it? Till lately we have known practically nothing about sleep. Though all of us, when we are well, do it every night, we do not learn by experience here. In fact the general experience is that the older we grow the less we sleep, though the more we wish to. Now at last we are beginning to find out a few of sleep's secrets—at least we are beginning to learn why we need sleep, and on the other hand why, when we feel we need sleep most, it eludes us.

Sleep is not merely rest; it is renovation and repair. Experiments carried out with healthy undergraduates showed this odd fact. For the first three hours after falling asleep the metabolism of the body actually increases. It is clear what this means. When the officials and clerks are gone, then the cleaning and repairing staff have to get to work. It has been known for some time that wounds heal quicker if the patient can sleep. It is only after the first three hours or so that the deeper centres of the body, after tidying up the mess we have left, can themselves turn in and rest.

This explains why, though a person may get on for a long time on three or four hours of sleep, in the end he usually finds himself nervously overdriven. If you take no more than three hours' sleep you are living on loans advanced from your deeper nervous system, and sooner or later you will have to meet the overdraft. Of course, people do vary in their need of sleep, but probably not nearly as much as we have supposed. It balances out in the end. He who regularly cuts the night hours due to sleep will probably be found sooner or later repaying them by days and even weeks a-bed.

ANOTHER REASON.

Research has disclosed another reason why we need so much sleep. Most of us think if we sleep well we sleep all night, though "like a log." This is a mistake. A drugged man, a man who has been tortured may sleep with death-like immobility—not the healthy, sound sleeper. It has been found that the usual spell of steady sleep is generally not more than ten minutes. After that the sleeper shifts himself, alters breathing, comes much nearer to the surface of consciousness, generally turns over. Then once more he switches back down into sleep. In short, he rocks himself. That is why it is important to sleep in the dark and, even more important, in the quiet. Every light, every murmur is probably attended to.

It has been found that long before the sleeper wakes his muscles will tauten if a light is brought near him. He is beginning to rouse himself long before he knows it. Sound is an even worse disturber. Nature lets us close our eyes but never our ears. We are always ready to notice a suspicious sound. Sleep, therefore, in the still hours is a sleep of a higher quality. In between the semi-rouses we slip deeper. Our ears report "All clear," and for a few minutes we snatch a profounder rest.

It sounds a restless business, but we must remember that Nature's ways of balancing up wear and repair are not ours. The great lung muscles, for instance, and the heart muscles are so made that, as they must always be on the go, they get their rest in between each breath and beat. A narrow margin, but enough.

Why can't we rest in the same economical way? The answer probably is that we are so intensely alive. Being fully conscious all the day is a tremendous strain and we pay for it by blacking out all the night—or at least if we were really good business men with our bodies we should pay these essential debts night by night as they fall due.

AN ESSENTIAL.

It is clear, then, that sleep is an essential, and that brings us to the second question which research is beginning to answer: Why, if we so need sleep, does sleep so often escape us? If we need air, we breathe. If we need sleep, why shouldn't we be able to close our eyes as we open our lungs and let nature do the rest?

Some people can, and the study of them and of animals has shown why so many of us can't. Sleep is an act of attention. You have got to shift your attention. With animals and some men nature seems to do that for them. They know how to attend to her orders and submit. They do not cling to being awake. But "brain workers" have taught themselves to interfere—never to submit to Nature without asking why, or at least becoming self-conscious about it. That kind of attention is fatal.

Think how you are riding a bicycle and, at least when you are learning, you will probably tumble off. Think how you are remembering a long poem, and the tongue stammers, or the fingering of a piano passage, and the fingers stumble. This is an illustration of what some psychologists have called the Law of Reversed Effort. The more you think about trying the less you can do the trick.

Our minds to-day are trained more and more to analyse everything. We are always trying, as we say, to follow a line of thought. That frame of mind is fatal to sleep. You must, as it were, dilute the mind, see things largely as a little out of focus—before sleep will come. That analytic attention has quite extraordinary power of keeping us awake.

This, then, seems the reason why we sleep so badly. We have so little control over our minds that we cannot stop them thinking; we can't switch over, declutch. We keep on saying, "Oh, how I wish I could sleep," but really we prefer to go on thinking.

A FEW HINTS.

So a few hints on how to sleep, or, rather, how to avoid keeping oneself awake, may help. The first thing is attention: learn to shift that. It is half the battle. That is the truth behind watching the sheep go through the hedge and the other pictorial tricks for overcoming sleeplessness.

But do not count them with a limit of say, 100. If you do your mind says, "What! 50 already gone and I'm still wide awake!" At the century it says with self-congratulatory triumph, "There, I know—" It has really been looking forward to being still awake at the 100! A far better way is to pay attention to the background of your thought. Nearly all the while, behind your reasonable thoughts, there is passing a stream of thought-pictures, (Continued on Next Column.)

OWING to an omission on the part of the postman we were not present at the Governor's Ball on Monday—but then most of the elite were not. Anyway we were very busy and trust that this excuse will serve as an apology to those who looked forward to our presence.

A feature of the evening was a Paul Jones which set the stone rolling and served as an introduction to many sparring partners who were waiting to fall into a clinch.

Coming as they did at a time when the Peak was feeling the housing depression more than a little, the invitations to the ball have started another back-to-the-Peak movement consisting of those people who received an invitation where they never expected one and others who expected one but never received it and have now got to pretend how indifferent they are.

The report that our colleague Mr. Kelly, was present at the ball by express invitation in recognition of his gallant rescue attempt on Monday are slightly exaggerated but he was one of the select gate-crashers who were allowed to remain.

The reason he attended, we gather, was that having spoiled his only everyday suit by jumping into the harbour he was reduced to going about in evening dress and there was only one function on Monday where he could decently wear that.

Lessons in Journalism
THE NEWS EDITOR.

The news editor is a very clever man. It takes a clever man to do a little work as he does in such a long time and yet always manage to be busy.

A cross between a sub-editor and a policeman, the news editor stands on one of the lowest social planes of vegetable life and is seldom seen out in daylight for fear of being attacked.

This creature has inordinate power in his little sphere and exercises it ruthlessly. Never being allowed to forget that he was once a reporter, he practises the meanest tricks on that long suffering tribe.

If you will notice them. Look at that easy, aimless procession. In a few minutes it has drawn you in and you are asleep.

Another help is not mental but bodily, and so perhaps more helpful in this age of education when we find it so much easier to do things with our bodies than with our minds. Change your breathing. Listen to a sleeping person. His breathing, when loud enough to be heard, is the opposite of conscious breathing. When you are very conscious of your breathing, when you are nervous, you hear the breath drawn in, not the breath sent out. It is the sleeper's breathing out that you hear. A snore is only a very successful breathing out. But all deep-sleep breathing is a sort of reversed snore.

Try it next time you sleep badly. Don't dash at it. Gradually change over from noticing your breathing-in to attending to your breathing-out. Don't be too interested. Pay also a little casual attention (the attention of a lazy person in a garden to birds skimming over a pond) to those vague, inconsequent pictures which are passing through the back of your mind.

You will have mastered the art of shifting attention. You will be asleep before you know it.

I'll give you just two minutes to get off my property.

MR. CHAN LIM-PAK REMANDED

RELEASED ON BAIL OF $10,000

COMMITTAL TO BE SOUGHT

Great interest was centred in the appearance at the Central Magistracy this morning of Chan Lim-pak, prominent member of the Chinese business community, on six counts of alleged fraudulent appropriation of money and fraudulent keeping of accounts of the Nanyang Tobacco Co.

Accused, who was arrested on a warrant yesterday and later released on bail of $10,000, came before Mr. Hamilton, and with him was Mr. M. K. Lo, who is appearing for the defence. Mr. Edgar Davidson, of Messrs. Hastings & Co., for the prosecution, intimated that the case would be one for committal to the Criminal Sessions.

The accused, aged 49 years, managing director of the Canton Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company, Ltd., a native of Kun Tsin village, Nanchang, with a residence at No. 15, Peak Road, Hongkong, was formally charged on six counts of fraudulent appropriation of money and fraudulent keeping of accounts of the Nanyang Tobacco Co. with regard to three sums each of $500, on March 31, 1933; July 31, 1933; and December 28, 1933.

Mr. Edgar Davidson, appeared for Mr. T. Johnson Wong, the complainant, and Mr. M. K. Lo was for the defence.

Mr. Davidson asked for a remand for as lengthy a period as possible as he was instructing counsel to appear, and the case would be one for committal.

Mr. Hamilton asked Mr. Lo whether seven days' remand on bail would be sufficient, and Mr. Lo agreed.

IMPOUNDING OF BOOKS.

Mr. Hamilton next asked whether there was likely to be any difficulty with regard to books, and Mr. Davidson asked that an order be made under Section 91 of the Larceny Ordinance, and suggested that letters, cash books and vouchers of last year be impounded.

Mr. Lo:—I am not here to oblige the prosecution in any shape or form, and, speaking as solicitor for the Company, I see no reason why the Company should give up possession of any books which are properly in their custody. I will take notice of any application my friend makes, but in regard to this I oppose. For one thing, your Worship will appreciate that the prosecution has no doubt taken a long time in making investigations, whereas this of course is a great surprise to the defence. I should be personally embarrassed if the books are not accessible to me.

Mr. Hamilton:—I was intending to propose that the books should be in police custody, and that neither side should have access to them before the other. I may go a step further and subsequently dictate the location of the books.

DOES SECTION APPLY?

Mr. Lo:—I cannot see that that section, read out by my friend applies at all. This section apparently relates to an offence of larceny of property stolen, and it seems to give your Worship power, on proper information, to search for such stolen property. There is no question of search for property in this case at all. The books are in possession of the Company. There is no question of these books having been stolen and being found in a certain place. It may be that this section applies, but I thought, on reading it, that it does not. I should like to argue this point further if necessary.

Mr. Hamilton:—Your position is that the proper course is to serve a notice on the Company for the production of the books?

Mr. Lo:—Yes.

Mr. Davidson:—It is equally obvious that we could have applied for a search warrant without giving notice to anybody at all; instead, we are applying now. There can be no question about this being within the section.

MATTER OF INTERPRETATION.

Mr. Hamilton:—So far, the position is that we have a section of which you take one view and Mr. Lo the other. That is not being argued in any case; it is merely a question of interpretation of English, and, as I take it, it means that neither side has to decide it. I think Mr. Lo had

NO LICENCE FOR REVOLVER

TECHNICAL OFFENCE ADMITTED

A plea of guilty to a technical offence was tendered by Mr. J. M. Hamilton, in the Central Police Court this morning, on behalf of Chiu Mui-chau, of No. 4 Arsenal Street, who was summoned for possession of a revolver without a valid licence on May 28. A fine of $25 was imposed.

Mr. Hamilton:—In this case, my client had his licence since 1917, but, on account of his aged mother's illness and subsequent death, he had forgotten to renew his arms licence. It was only recently that he discovered that he had not done so. On May 26, he saw Inspector Baker who asked him to produce the revolver on May 28 and he was summoned. I understand Inspector Baker is not pressing the charge.

Inspector A. V. Baker said he was not pressing the case, but pointed out that the defendant moved from his original address without notifying the police, and three letters had been delivered at the old address.

FANLING GOLF

L. C. Grover Qualifies For Captain's Cup

Playing over the old course at Fanling during last week-end, L. C. Grover returned a card of 90-14-76, and qualified for the Captain's Cup.

W. L. Marshall returned a similar card, but was disqualified for a technical error in his card.

There were 33 entries, the majority of whom were unable to complete their round owing to a deluge which flooded the course.

better have 24 hours' remand if he wants to argue the matter.

Mr. Davidson:—If it is desirable at all, the delay of 24 hours may be too much.

Mr. Hamilton:—I am not quite clear as to what difficulty 24 hours' delay will make for the prosecution.

Mr. Davidson:—Possibly none. Mr. Lo is willing to go down there with me and take possession of the books.

WEEK'S REMAND.

Mr. Hamilton:—I presume you must have some case, Mr. Lo?

Mr. Lo agreed there was a case.

Mr. Hamilton:—I will then remand the case for one week. If the matter can be adjusted without issuing a warrant, it will be more satisfactory to both sides.

In answer to Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Davidson said that it was likely the case would be ready for trial before the end of next month.

Defendant was accordingly remanded for one week on bail of $10,000.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

NORTH CANNOT MOVE A SOUL AND AGONY.—Shakespeare.

This evening the British members of the Canton Club have invited their friends to a reception in the Club. Our Own Correspondent.

Whilst riding his motor cycle on Kennedy Road yesterday, Mr. J. H. Maycock, of No. 6 Army Ordnance Depot quarters, knocked down a boy, Chiu Shun, 16, who received face injuries and was sent to hospital for treatment.

Two defendants, both answering to the name of Wong Hoi, admitted charges of theft before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning. The first Wong Hoi, who stole two opium pipes and a jacket from No. 14 Chung Wo Lane, was fined $10 or fourteen days, while a similar penalty was meted out to the other man, who pleaded guilty to taking a clock from No. 19, Aberdeen Street.

"He was in a pretty hopeless condition and did not recover until this morning," remarked Sub-Inspector L. Mist when a boatman, Wong Kan, 23, was charged before Mr. Macfadyen with being drunk and incapable. He admitted the charge. Defendant was stated to have made a general nuisance of himself outside the Star Ferry wharf at the Tiffin interval yesterday and was arrested by a Weinhelvet constable, on complaint. A fine of two dollars, or four days, was imposed.

A fine of $15 was imposed by Mr. Hamilton this morning on Lam Sau-king, married woman, of No. 301 Queen's Road West, on a summons for keeping an unregistered multi-tail, named Tai Ying-kwai, alias Shing Tai, aged 16. Sub-Inspector McEwen stated the girl was being kept at the Po Leung Kuk and would probably return to her mother. She was well treated by the defendant who already had two registered multi-tails. The girl was presented to her by her natural mother, who is eight years ago for a loan of $97.

NANTUCKET DISASTER SEQUEL

U.S. CLAIM AGAINST THE OLYMPIC

HALF A MILLION DOLLARS

New York, June 5.

A huge claim for damages is being lodged against the White Star liner Olympic as a sequel to her mishap last month when she rammed and sank the Nantucket lightship in a dense fog.

The United States Government is claiming half a million dollars against the Olympic in connexion with the sinking.

Eleven counts against the ship are detailed in the statement of claim, including allegations of failure to keep a proper lookout, of excessive and dangerous speed in a fog, and of failure to take proper steps when the danger of a collision was apparent.

"CONDEMNED TO BE SOLD"

The claim demands that the Olympic, which is due to arrive in New York to-morrow, should be "condemned to be sold to pay the damages sought."

No claim has been made in behalf of the relatives of the members of the crew of the Nantucket lightship who perished in the disaster.

Captain Hinks, commander of the Olympic, following the disaster, stated that the lightship's directional wireless beam became confused a few minutes before the crash. He altered course ten degrees and shortly after the order was acted upon, the lightship was sighted dead ahead in the fog and collision was inevitable.

VICTIM OF OWN BEAM?

A survivor declared that the Olympic was not seen from the Nantucket boat until one minute before the crash.

The New York Department of commerce expressed the view that the lightship was the victim of her own beam wireless, recalling that when another liner shortly before had scraped her side, the navigator was accurately following the beam's instructions, but could not alter course in time.

When a male mendicant appeared before Mr. Macfadyen this morning, it was stated by the police that he could write English very well. A fine of $2, or four days, was imposed.

Sentence of six weeks' hard labour was passed on So Kau, who was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with the attempted theft of a radiator cap belonging to Mr. Simmonds, of the Hongkong and China Gas Co. Sergeant Ritchie stated that at 9.15 a.m. yesterday, Mr. Simmonds left his car, No. 4034, outside the office, and defendant was seen by a foki of the Company trying to unscrew the radiator cap from the car. The foki raised the alarm and defendant was arrested a short distance away.

A wedding will be held in Christ Church, Shumeeen, this month, when Miss Elizabeth Newgen Hack, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hack, will marry Mr. Clement Guy Satterthwaite, of Vickers, Ltd. The date has been fixed for 14th, and the reception will afterwards be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Batchelor.

The bride's uncle, and in the absence of her father he will give her away. The bride's only attendant will be Mrs. R. K. Batchelor. This will be the first wedding to be held on Shumeeen for some considerable time.

Li Hing, aged 29, was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with breaking into the first floor of No. 115 Wooning Street at 8 p.m. on Monday. It was stated that defendant gained admittance to the floor by prising open the door with a pen-knife. He took away clothing to the total value of approximately $50. He made three trips to the floor, taking away a quantity of clothing each time. He left a parcel in a side lane, and went back to No. 115 Wooning Street, but on his return to the door he found it locked. He was gone. Sentence of three months was passed.

BLOCKED THEATRE PASSAGES

FINES IMPOSED IN TWO CASES.

An excuse that the people on the passage-way were mainly women with babies was made by Mr. D. L. Strellett, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, when he appeared on behalf of Wong Yiu-tung, licensee of the Mongkok Theatre, who was summoned before Mr. Wynne-Jones for allowing the passage to be blocked during a performance.

Mr. J. C. Fitzhenry, of the Fire Brigade, said that when he visited the theatre at 8.30 p.m. on May 20 he found 12 people obstructing the passage during a performance.

Mr. Strellett said the people consisted mainly of women with babies. These women crowded round the doors because they could easily slip out of the theatre if their babies started to cry.

In answer to Mr. Fitzhenry's remark that there would be great danger in the event of an alarm of fire, Mr. Strellett said the theatre seemed to him to have "more doors than walls." As a matter of fact, he said, there were more doors than were required by the Ordinance.

A nominal fine of $10 was imposed.

Li Chui-ying, licensee of the Kwong Chee Theatre, was fined $25 for a like offence. In this case, Mr. Fitzhenry said there were 40 people obstructing the passage-way. The theatre was full at the time, and the licensee himself was not present. It seemed to him that the employees might have allowed people to go in without accounting for them to the management.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR BROKER

COURT ESTREETS $200 BAIL

Li Lu, alias Li Chak, 24, described as a broker, failed to appear at the Magistracy this morning, on a charge of obtaining $5 from Wong Sung-pung by pretending he was authorised by the Sanitary Department to inspect Wong's house and stating that unless the money was paid to purchase presents for certain members of the Sanitary Department, alterations in the building should be carried out. There was an alternative charge of obtaining $5 by means of fraud.

Defendant's bail of $200 was estimated, and, on the application of Det.-Insp. J. Murphy, for the prosecution, a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Mr. M. A. da Silva, who appeared for the defence at the first hearing, stated that since his client had been out on bail he had received no further instructions. He now wished to withdraw from the case.

PLEDGING OF GIRLS

$250 FINE IN CASE AT KOWLOON

"I think we will discourage this pledging of girls," remarked Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning in imposing a fine of $250 or, in default, three months' imprisonment on a man named Lai Kai who was summoned for keeping a multi without registering her at the S.C.A.

Sub-Inspector Fraser told the Court that the girl was banded to defendant by her mother some years ago as security on a loan of $130. When the girl's mother asked for her daughter back later, defendant refused to give her up.

The girl made a report to the Mongkok Police Station last month to the effect that she had been badly treated, and this was how the attention of the S.C.A. was focussed on the case. A lady inspector had the girl examined immediately, but there were no marks on her.

His Worship:—We had a similar case last week. How much did I fine the defendant?

Inspector Fraser:—$100. In that case the girl was well treated.

BUTCHER SHOT AT ABATTOIR

BULLOCK KILLING ACCIDENT

A strange accident occurred at the Kennedy Town abattoir yesterday morning.

Sanitary-Inspector White, in a report to the Police stated that at 7.40 a.m. on shooting a bullock with a .44 Winchester rifle, the bullet passed through the animal, penetrated a door and entered the foreman of the abattoir, Mr. Ng Luk, who was sent to the Government Civil Hospital.

Nothing had changed; merely two women had met for luncheon and had parted. But, for Gypsy, there was a difference. Her crystal ball of contentment had been shattered.

To Tom she said nothing of the experience except that she had seen Lila, had lunched with her, that it had been "nice." He, with his impervious masculine eyes, had seen nothing. He did not notice Gypsy looking about her with discontented eyes. He did not observe that she sighed now over the bed making and groaned over the dishes. "He only knew that his home was still well kept and his meals were served. He thought Gypsy shared the deep happiness he himself felt.

The days marched by. April passed but in the city you would scarcely notice this, except that tulips showed their heads in the park beds and all the trees in the narrow ways were budding. On Sundays when the young Weavers went over to Jersey they saw that spring was really come.

burning leaves. On the first of May, as was his time honoured custom, he planted his annuals. Gypsy followed him about, looking prettier than usual in an old crepe de chine frock, washed creamy white, with a woolly scarf around her shoulders.

She sat in an old basket chair and rested her chin on her hands, dreaming idly. Her father dug a trench with a trowel and dropped in the seeds from a bright painted packet. Phlox, drummondii, ... bachelor's button ... gypsophila ... Gypsy could shut her eyes and smell the good earth, the heavenly scent of freshly turned loam.

"Nice, Daddy," she said dreamily. "Ummm ..." He went about, dropping seeds into the little ridges, covering them up again. He had, himself, this day a deep sense of well being; things growing made a man hope again.

"It's a good time of year," he said seriously. "I like it." He had his old garden clothes on. His lawyer's hands were grubby from work with the soil. He was growing bald. He looked neither rich nor successful, nor was he, but Gypsy felt a swelling of the heart. She loved him! He was so good and real and fine. As real as the sun or the soil or the rain. The vague unhappiness that had stayed with her ever since she saw Lila dissolved like mist in the sun. She stood up, suddenly, running toward Tom, who came down the garden path. "She clung to him, laughing. "You know something, Tommy?" "No." He held her close, thinking her lovelier than ever. Her new estate had had a sort of wild-rose bloom on her. "We've got to have a place of our own soon. A house, and a garden. Roots of our own." "That's right," He regarded her gravely. He had thought that himself many, many times. But it was quite out of the question. They hadn't the money. They couldn't manage it. But he humoured Gypsy now. She was so eager, so sudden and passionate about it. With a sort of quiet laughter in his heart, he echoed her words. "We've got to have a place of our very own." But how? How was it to be managed? He did not know. (To Be Continued.)

MR. HENDERSON'S ONSLAUGHT ON FRENCH ARMS TACTICS

DROUGHT RELIEF SCHEME

OVER £100,000,000 TO BE SPENT

WASHINGTON TO PAY

Washington, June 5. Despite glad tidings of the breaking of the drought and the downpour of fresh rains over a wide area, the authorities in the Middle West have not modified their plans for vast relief in the drought areas.

President Roosevelt outlined to over fifty members of Congress from the affected States, a programme providing for an expenditure of $225,000,000.

The scheme involves the need for the passage of legislation during the present session of Congress, and a Bill will be introduced for enactment almost immediately.

A sum of $100,000,000 will be provided to purchase additional beef and dairy cattle to make good farmers' losses, another $100,000,000 will be used for the processing of cattle and other products, a third $100,000,000 will be employed on emergency works, and a fourth $100,000,000 on furnishing livestock.

Very heavy rains, averaging half an inch, fell in sections of Minnesota and North Dakota today.—Reuter.

GAMBLING DEBT QUARREL

Accused Changes When Stiff Fine Is Imposed

The story of an incident in Ice House Street yesterday afternoon was related in the Central Police Court this morning when Leung Chai, 26, employed as No. 1 boy at the Masonic Hall, was charged with possession of an instrument (pair of scissors) fit for an unlawful purpose.

He pleaded guilty, but when a fine of $50 was imposed, changed his plea to a denial, stating that he wished to engage a solicitor. He alleged that two men attacked him.

According to Sub-Inspector Mist, defendant had owed complainant a gambling debt of $1.10 since May 30 and promised to pay yesterday. Complainant was F. Baptista, hotel runner at the Hotel Metropole. Accused went to Baptista's room and told him he was unable to pay yet. A quarrel ensued, and defendant drew a pair of scissors from his sock. A hotel coolie intervened but he was chased into Ice House Street by defendant who was prevented by a Chinese detective from stabbing the hotel runner. Defendant was remanded till to-morrow on bail of $100.

BRITAIN'S DEBT DEFAULT

taxation of the United States, including all Federal, State and local taxation.

This British taxation, amounting to close on one quarter of the national income, has aggravated British problems over a long period and the necessity of maintaining an army of unemployed has constituted a formidable problem to the national finance ever since the war ended.

In order to restore the national credit in 1931, the British people accepted, patiently and hopefully, an increase in taxation accompanied by a rigorous control of expenditure, and cuts in salaries and in the allowances of unemployed. But for these measures, the budget would have again shown a deficit last year, had it not been possible to secure by a conversion operation a revision of the interest charge on a proportion of the public debt.

NATION'S CONSCIENCE.

This enabled the Government to readjust the finances imposed in 1931 and to restore part of the cuts of salaries and whole of the cut in unemployment allowances, the continuance of which was on the nation's conscience ever since it was imposed.

It would have been a gross act of legal injustice to have deluded the British people into paying the United States while suspending the war debts due to United Kingdom.—British Wireless.

Commencing on Saturday next, weekly tombolas will be held in the Garrison Lecture Hall, commencing at 7.10 p.m.

CHINESE SCHOOL EDUCATION

SIR WM. HORNE'S ADDRESS

TEACHER'S DAY CELEBRATION

The importance of the study of Chinese and the necessity of acquiring lucidity of expression in their own language was pointed out to Chinese school teachers by Sir William Hornell in the course of an address this morning, at the King's Theatre, in connection with the celebration of "Teachers' Day."

Sir William urged the teachers to remember that they were dealing with living material, not automatic machines, and that their contact with their pupils must be vital.

Sir Shou-sun Chow and many prominent educationists were present at the meeting which was presided over by Mr. T. Y. Chan who explained that although the Chinese Teachers' Day was observed first time three years ago in China, this was the first time there had been a local celebration.

In a brief speech, Sir Shou-sun Chow mentioned the important position of teachers in the community, and referred to their high responsibilities. He congratulated Mr. Chan and his associates on the successful celebration and wished the Chinese teachers in the Colony a most prosperous future.

CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH.

Addressing the meeting, Sir William Hornell, the Vice-Chancellor of the Hongkong University, said:

When Mr. Ching Hing-chow came and asked me to attend this celebration, I had, I am ashamed to say, never heard of the Chinese Teachers' Association. There are Societies and Associations in this Colony and indeed everywhere, which meet annually, consume tea or some other alleged innocuous beverage, proclaim most in platitudes the most exquisite sentiments and aspirations, and then disperse for another year, during which period the only activity shown is the frantic and frequently unavailing efforts on the part of the Hon. Treasurer to collect members' subscriptions. I hope that this Association is not a society of this kind. I trust that this Association has come into existence to meet a real need.

I, of course, know nothing about schools in Hongkong—my sphere is the University which, incidentally, draws its material entirely from schools. But anyone whose misfortune it is to have to drive along the Cause Road about 12.30 p.m. or 4.30 p.m. cannot fail to be interested in school education. It takes the patient ingenuity of even the most careful driver not to commit, while he is making this perilous passage, homicide which would of course be culpable. For Cause Road literally swarms with school-boys and school-girls. I am therefore going to venture on the statement that there is throughout this Colony a demand for instruction in schools, the persistence of which is irresistible. Every parent wants not only his sons but his daughters to attend some school; the demand has long since outgrown the supply of Government and Government-aided schools.

NOT SATISFACTORY.

The members of this Association are, I understand, teachers in vernacular primary schools, also in unaided schools of a wider range. The age range of the pupils in the latter schools cover childhood and adolescence. Some of the schools in the latter category send candidates for the Matriculation Examination of the University. Now, I have not visited many schools in Hongkong and I have never been privileged to watch a Hongkong school working. But this I do know, that the results of the school examinations which the University conducts are not satisfactory and that the staff of the University are not altogether satisfied with the capacity which these few boys and girls who come to the University possess.

Now, this ought not to be so. University courses should not be beyond the power of the average intelligent boy or girl, who has been through what we should call in England a secondary school course. But not a few of those boys and girls who finally get to the University do in effect find it difficult to pass their examination. You may say that the standards of the Hongkong University are too high. The founders of the University insisted that these standards should be comparable with those which are obtainable in England.

Disastrous End of Conference Threatened

SHARP EXCHANGE OF WORDS

BARTHOUS AGAIN ROUSES BITTERNESS

COLLAPSE NEARS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency Ordinance, 1924. Received, June 6, 9.05 a.m.)

Geneva, June 5.

The Disarmament Conference threatens to come to a disastrous end on a note of embittered counter-accusations regarding responsibility for failure.

Mr. Arthur Henderson and M. Barthou (who quarrelled with Sir John Simon last week) had a sharp passage of words at to-day's meeting of the Bureau of the Conference, but Mr. Henderson was partially mollified when M. Barthou apologised for insinuations of a lack of impartiality.

Eleventh-hour efforts are still being made to avert collapse, but the prospects are practically nil, as even those making the efforts tackle their task in a spirit of pessimism.

FRANCE REJECTS COMPROMISE SUGGESTION

The Bureau meeting re-assembled at 3.40 p.m. this afternoon and Mr. Henderson proposed a compromise resolution which sought to satisfy the Anglo-American demands for disarmament and the Franco-Russian demands for security.

The resolution provides that the General Commission shall continue with efforts to secure an agreement for disarmament, while a Political Commission, representing all the Powers, should consider the question of security.

FRENCH ATTITUDE.

M. Barthou rejected Mr. Henderson's proposal, the nature of his attack leading to sharp words. Afterwards, French quarters announced the end of the Conference.

They declared that there was no alternative to bringing the Conference to an end as long as security was not to be actively discussed, and first.

It is understood that Senor Madriga, the Spanish delegate, is attempting a last-minute intervention, but the French insist that the Conference is over.

SECURITY FIRST.

M. Barthou said he was compelled to reject the Henderson compromise resolution because it placed political questions before security.

He declared that France would not oppose Germany's return to the Disarmament Conference but was definitely not willing to make any sacrifice in order to induce Germany to return.

Mr. Anthony Eden, for Britain, accepted the Henderson resolution wholeheartedly.

HENDERSON THREAT.

Mr. Henderson then threatened to resign his position as president of the Conference if the French did not submit a proposal which would prove acceptable to the Conference.

He angrily declared that if M. Barthou did not present a plan before to-morrow (Wednesday) in lieu of attacking every proposal by any other country, he would submit France's responsibility for the Conference's failure to the General Commission.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

The French delegate, he said, had thrown down every possible proposal. It was therefore incumbent upon them to offer a substitute, to present something. Mr. Henderson also stated plainly that he was unable to tolerate M. Barthou's insinuations that he (Mr. Henderson) was not impartial.

After Mr. Henderson's threat to resign, M. Barthou explained that he did not mean to impugn the President's impartiality, and said that they were not divided on personal differences but on differences of doctrine.

PUBLIC MEETING.

He then asked that a public meeting should be held in order

A BREACH OF TRADITION

U.S. AND BRITISH DEBT NOTE

ASTONISHMENT IN LONDON

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency Ordinance, 1924. Received, June 6, 10.10 a.m.)

London, June 5. Much astonishment has been caused in London political circles by the action of the United States Government in releasing the British war debt note before Mr. Chamberlain had had a chance to place the data before the House of Commons in accordance with tradition.

Although there is this feeling, members of the Cabinet declined to make any public statement on the matter or to discuss it.—Reuter Special.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer made his promised statement in the House of Commons to-day.

A GROWING DEBT?

It was followed by the issue of a White Paper containing the recent correspondence on the subject between the British and United States Governments, drawing special attention to the fact that while Britain borrowed $4,277,000,000 from the United States, payments have been made totalling $2,025,000,000 and yet the nominal amount of the debt still outstanding amounts to $4,713,785,000.

Mr. Chamberlain recalled that the British Government, in its Note of December 1, 1932, gave a full statement of the reasons which convinced them that the system of inter-governmental war debt obligations as it existed before the Hoover Moratorium could not be revived, and that a radical revision of the existing settlements was essential. The United States Government, in their Note of December 7, 1932, welcomed the suggestion for a close examination of the whole subject between the two countries.

The British Government paid the instalment due on December 15, 1932, in gold, explaining that this payment was not to be regarded as a resumption of the annual payments under the existing agreement, and that it was made because the United States Government had stated that, in their opinion, such payment would greatly increase the prospect of a satisfactory approach to the whole problem.

FRUITLESS TALKS.

Discussions took place both in the spring and autumn last year, but it was not found possible to arrive at a settlement acceptable to the two countries. On June 15 and December 15, 1933, the British Government made token payments in acknowledgment of their debt, and on each occasion the President of the United States expressed his personal view that he would not regard the British Government as in default.

Mr. Chamberlain continued: "The British Government would have been prepared to make a further payment on the 15th instant in acknowledgment of the debt, and

UNDERGROUND OIL RESERVOIRS

FRENCH FEARS OF AIR RAIDS

Paris, June 5.

France's anxieties concerning the peril of air attacks in the event of war were exemplified in the Chamber of Deputies to-day.

It is learned that France is now to embark upon a five-year programme for the construction of underground oil reservoirs to protect the Navy's fuel from air attacks.

The details were explained by the Minister of Marine to the Finance Committee of the Chamber this afternoon.

Of 825,000,000 francs recently allotted to the French Navy under the national defence scheme, 620,000,000 francs will be spent for this purpose, while eighty millions will be devoted to coastal defence, mainly in the form of shore batteries in North Africa, the French Mediterranean Coast and the Strait of Dover.

Another step in air defence was outlined by the Minister of the Interior, who explained the Council of Ministers' Bill for the defence of the civil population against air attacks.—Reuter.

without prejudice to their right again to present a case for its readjustment, on the assumption that they would again have received the President's declaration that he would not consider them in default. But they understand that in consequence of recent legislation passed in the United States, such a declaration is no longer possible, so that the procedure adopted by common agreement in 1933 cannot be followed on the present occasion.

THE SUM DUE.

"In fact, our Ambassador was informed by the United States Administration on May 11, that any Government failing to pay in full the instalment due under the existing agreement on June 15, would have to be regarded as in default, and on May 25, the Treasury of the United States addressed a communication to the British Government setting out details of the various items, including arrears of 196 million dollars due last year, and amounting altogether to a sum of 202 million dollars, or over 50 million pounds sterling, due on the 15th instant.

"His Majesty's Government were therefore, in these circumstances, faced with the alternative either of paying this sum of 50 million pounds in full and of paying a further sum of over 20 million pounds on December 15 next—that is to say, over 70 million pounds for the current year—or of suspending all interim payments pending a final revision by agreement of the existing war debt settlement.

IMPOSSIBLE SITUATION.

"The first of these alternatives would necessitate corresponding demand by the British Government from their own war debtors, for it would not be possible to contemplate a situation in which Britain would be called upon to resume payment of their war obligations to others in full, while continuing to suspend all demands for payment of war obligations due to them. The resumption of full payments to the United States would therefore revise the whole system of inter-governmental war debt payments and would postpone indefinitely the chances of whole recovery.

"After full deliberation, the British Government came to the conclusion that they could not assume the responsibility of adopting a course attended by such disastrous consequences. Accordingly, they have addressed to the United States Government a Note in which, after briefly restating their views on the whole question of war debts, they state that, while deeply regretting the circumstances which have imposed upon them the necessity for such a decision, they have concluded that they must suspend further payments until it becomes possible to discuss the ultimate settlement of inter-governmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement.

NO REPUDIATION.

"The British Government have again made it clear that they have no intention of repudiating their obligations, and will be prepared to enter upon further discussions on the subject at any time when, in the opinion of the President of the United States, such discussions would be likely to produce results of value.—British Wireless.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

There is a certain thrill in making all your trump separately. Of course, a hand must be timed properly to allow this. You must make sure that you are going to retain control of the hand.

To-day's hand is not difficult to play, but the declarer makes ten trump tricks and two aces. If he had led even one round of trump, his contract would have been defeated. I thought the bidding on the hand rather interesting when the hand was played.

The Bidding

East has a close decision to make between doubling the one diamond or bidding a spade. Personally, I would prefer the double. With that hand you are certainly willing to play it at two spades.

When South bid two clubs, West's bid of two diamonds was a cue bid showing support for spades. On the next round, when West forced in clubs, he was making a direct slam try.

East showed control of the heart suit with a bid of four hearts. While I don't believe in misuse of ace-showing bids, there are times when an ace-showing bid of this kind is valuable. That was all the information that West needed to jump to six spades.

The Play

South's opening lead was the king of clubs, declarer won with the ace in dummy and discarded a losing heart. The hand will cross-ruff right out for ten tricks. All the declarer needs to lose is a heart.

If a spade had been opened, of course the declarer would then have to lead up to the queen of hearts to develop a trick to make his contract. He would then use eight of his trump for cross-ruffing.

Today's Contract Problem

South plays the contract at six no trump. West opens the deuce of spades. South wins and starts the heart suit. Should East win the first or second heart trick? And if not, why?

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET FIRM

According to Messrs. Swan, Colburn and Fritz, the New York market was firm yesterday. Business done 740,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—Stocks were upward and more active, led by gold-mining and silver shares, due to inflation rumours. Many traders are convinced that further inflation is imperative if the Administration wishes to prevent a sharp downturn in business and commodity prices, therefore they believe that the President will raise the price of gold as soon as Congress adjourns. Soaring grain prices also helped due to buying following bullish foreign crop reports and inflation talk. Curb stocks were upward. Bonds were irregularly lower.

Messrs. Swan, Colburn and Fritz's New York office report:—Stocks: The market moved ahead aggressively on a light volume of business as news becomes more cheerful. Wheat: Liquidation was terminated by new buying in a small way, but there is a general growing belief that the rains have come too late to have much effect on the crop. Cotton: Unconfirmed rumours of a change in the gold price, the strength of other markets, the scarcity of contracts and of demand from the mills and complaints of rain in the Eastern Belt are all contributing to today's strength. Textiles are quiet and are reported not to be in sympathy with the present advance in the price of the raw material. Rubber: The market showed impressive strength on the scarcity of offerings, while the gold rumour also helped. Sugar: Firm, with the passage of the Tariff Act and the probability that the increase in preferential to Cuban sugar will be considered bullish. The drought is threatening the beet crop here and in Europe. Silver: Unchanged.

In addition to this very gratifying result is added a sum of $20 (£13.4) representing a last minute anonymous donation received in memory of "G.H.J."

Donations received amounted to $1,512; donations for, and collections at the Concert realised $582.05; and the Empire Day Street Collection produced $3,788.93, making a grand total of $5,882.98. In addition there was the anonymous donation referred to above.

From the total receipts the sum of $126.00 has been deducted for expenses.

Nicotine? Not at all. That is tobacco tar — the dark brown, semi-solid, intensely irritant product of burning leaf. You see what it does to your fingers — think what it does to your throat! That's what causes the coughing and catarrh, the burning, the dried-up feeling. . . . The filter tip of a du Maurier traps tobacco tar. Nicotine — suave enchantment — lives in the cool, full-flavoured smoke of a du Maurier cigarette. Smoke that is smoother for being unspoil — better for being clean.

BOWLS TITLES

SEVERAL TIES IN OPEN SINGLES

GUTIERREZ WINS

The first round of the Open Singles lawn bowls championship was commenced yesterday afternoon when several ties were decided.

On the Police R. C. green where L. A. Gutierrez of the Club de Recreo met B. E. Maughan the Yacht Club player, the game was very even throughout and it was not until the 22nd head that the former champion qualified for the second round. On the 21st head the scores were 19-19 and then the Portuguese representative scored a two to give him the necessary 21 points.

T. F. Stainton of the Tai Koo R. C. eliminated Y. Abbas of the Craignower C. C. by 21 shots to 11 on the Hongkong Football Club Green.

E. G. Post (Police R. C.) qualified against Neil Drummond (Tai Koo R. C.) on the Craignower C. C. green, winning by 21 shots to 15. Two Craignower players in J. Cavanagh and M. J. Medina were opposed on the Civil Service green where the former won by 21-16.

At the Yacht Club T. Armstrong of the Civil Service C. C. won against W. H. B. Muskett of the Hongkong Electric R. C.

A surprise was created at the Club de Recreo green when H. Gittins defeated R. P. Phillips by 21 shots to 13 on the 20th head.

On the K.B.G.C. green, R. A. C. Basto defeated W. Blair by 21 shots to 18. The game was concluded on the 23rd head.

In the first session of the final of the Consolation Prize round of the Contract Bridge tournament, P. Abeser and Cheung U. Pui lead M. H. Lo and Horace Lo by 2,670 points.

Dazzling Doubles Form
By Mrs. Godfree

ENGLISH GIRLS IMPRESS WITH EXCELLENT DISPLAYS

The Wightman Cup trials were held last month, and critics generally agree that they were highly successful, revealing that on form, England has good chances of winning back the trophy from American at Wimbledon this year.

Mr. H. S. Scrivenor and Mr. Frank Poxon, two well-known London critics offer interesting opinions, which are set out below.

A wise man once wrote: "Of all things there cometh satiety." It was also somewhat baffling that Miss Round and Miss Nuthall, who had played together each day and had won two matches on Thursday and one (rather luckily) on Friday, should have lost both their matches on Saturday; but as I have already suggested, I fancy satiety had something to do with it.

The features of the play were the two victories gained by Mrs. Godfree and Miss Dearman, and the double defeat of Miss Nuthall and Miss Round, writes Frank Poxon in the News-Chronicle.

Mrs. Godfree, who had played so finely on the previous day, was again in splendid form, her court-craft being admirable. It seems practically certain that she will be picked for the doubles in the Wightman Cup.

I do not know who was chiefly responsible for asking her to play in these trials, but it was certainly an inspiration which is likely to have very beneficial results.

FINE INTERCEPTIONS.

The player whom I would place next to Mrs. Godfree, on the form shown in these trials, is Mrs. Whittingstall. She and Miss Lyle played brilliantly on Saturday while beating Miss Nuthall and Miss Round by two sets to one.

Mrs. Whittingstall's work at the net was up to the standard of a good man doubles player. Her interceptions were made with lightning speed, and she always "put the ball away." Miss Lyle played her usual role of being absolutely safe.

Both Miss Lyle and Miss Dearman have strong claims to be ranked as two of the best doubles players in the country. They do not scintillate, but they are extremely sound.

Miss Stammers and Miss Yorke played much better than on the previous two days while beating Mrs. Pittman and Miss Scriven in straight sets; but Miss Stammers is far more likely to play in the Wightman Cup singles than in the doubles.

Intense
Interest
In TestsWORLD WIDE DEMAND
FOR TICKETS

London. Interest in the Australian cricketers is not confined to this country and their own. From all over the world letters are being received requesting tickets for the Test matches.

The match at the Oval will not be played until mid-August, yet already enough foreign money has come in to start a bureau de change on a small scale.

Mr. A. F. Davis, the Surrey secretary, says that quite a number of Australians are making the trip and have taken the precaution of booking in advance.

Lord's Cricket Ground has had several requests for blocks of tickets from Holland, where there are one or two teams which have played against touring sides from this country.

For the five Tests thousands of tickets have already been sold and many hundreds of pounds are changing hands for reserved seats, which are being rapidly exhausted.

THIS DOG BUSINESS

A KOWLOON MAN
BEWILDERED

NEW TERRITORIES REGULATION

Astonishment that police officers should have allowed him to take his dog out to the New Territories from Kowloon and then summon him for bringing it back was expressed by A. H. Delcourt, of
No. 247 Prince Edward Road, who was summoned before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, for bringing his dog in from the Territories to Kowloon without a permit from the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon on May 20.

In answer to the charge, defendant admitted that he was bringing the dog in from the Territories to Kowloon when he was stopped by the police. He said he had been out in his car and had taken his dog with him. He was not prevented from taking his dog out, but "I was quite astonished to find that I could not take it back," he added.
His Worship explained that the measures were taken because dogs in the Territories were not muzled and that was the place where rabies existed. "Your dog might easily have been bitten by one of the village dogs in the Territories," his Worship said.

IN CAR ALL THE TIME.

Defendant:—But my dog was in the car all the time.

His Worship:—Quite. That might have been so on this occasion. But if the dog was in the car all the time, why take it out

Dock, was summoned for the same offence in respect of the same date, and was also cautioned.

MERTHYR ELECTION

LABOUR EASILY
HOLDS SEAT

FOUR-CORNERED FIGHT

London, June 6.

The result of the bye-election at Merthyr Tydfil, caused by the death of the Labour M.P., Mr. R.
C. Wallhead, who had represented the constituency for twelve years, was declared early this morning
as follows:

S. O. Davies (Labour)	18,645
J. V. Evans (Liberal)	10,370
Campbell Stephens (I.L.P.)	3,508
W. Hannington (Com.)	3,409
Lab. maj. over Lib.	8,269

The Labour candidate, although many votes were diverted to the more extreme wings of the Socialist movement, retained a clear majority over all other candidates. The last election saw a straight fight between Mr. Wall-head and a New Party candidate, the Labour majority being 13,789.

Nearly 36,000 went to the poll to-day, five hundred better than in the general election. The Conservatives made no attempt to capture a hopeless seat.—Reuter.

Tau Shing, 28, was charged before
Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with the theft of a key, property of Mr. A. Bianconi, the Italian Consul General, from his residence "Chuen Chow," Repulse Bay.
An application for 48 hours' remand was granted.
